Seventy five years . . . distinguish our school. Traditions have been recorded, related, modified and . . . forgotten. Recognition of our institution's accomplishments is silently acknowledged. We pay tribute to these factors within this book; on these pages are the results of our administrative history. The school year 1962-1963 is bound in this spirit of dedication.

A place, a landmark, a monument to the generations of tradition, building and ideas of our community. An institution of education built upon a philosophy with the spirit of progress. An institution extending opportunities for the individual to discover. An institution dedicated in developing citizens to continually improve our culture.

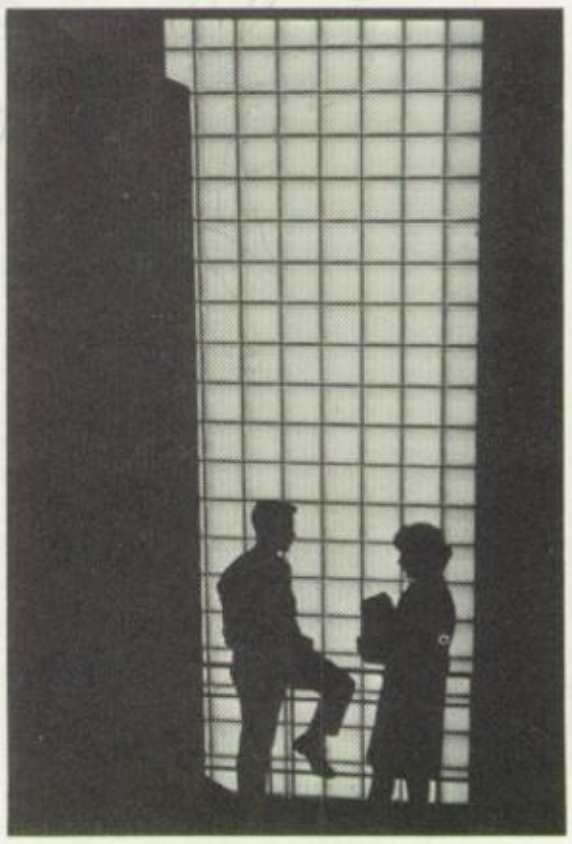
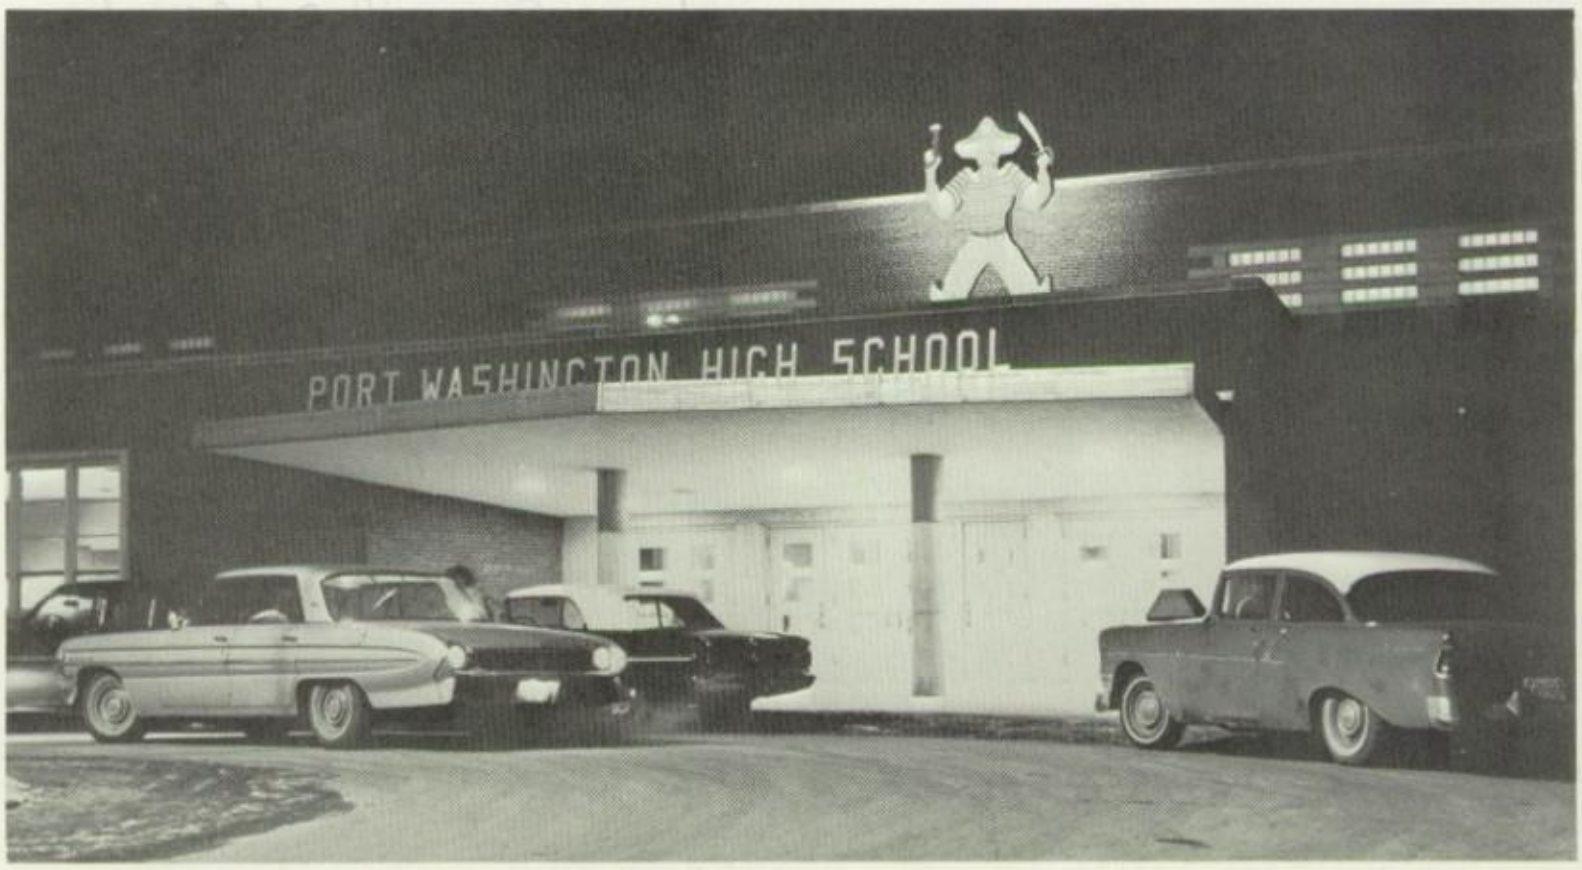
To Begin

A Phase of Learning

We have come from Waubeka, Fredonia, Belgium, Saukville, West Side, North Side to the heart of Port Washington. To begin a phase of learning, to search for ourselves, to find it frightening, yet exciting, unique, and even fun. A comprehensive system with an environment of activity alive with the forces of youth. Making friends, finding interests, meeting influences--all a part of the beginning.



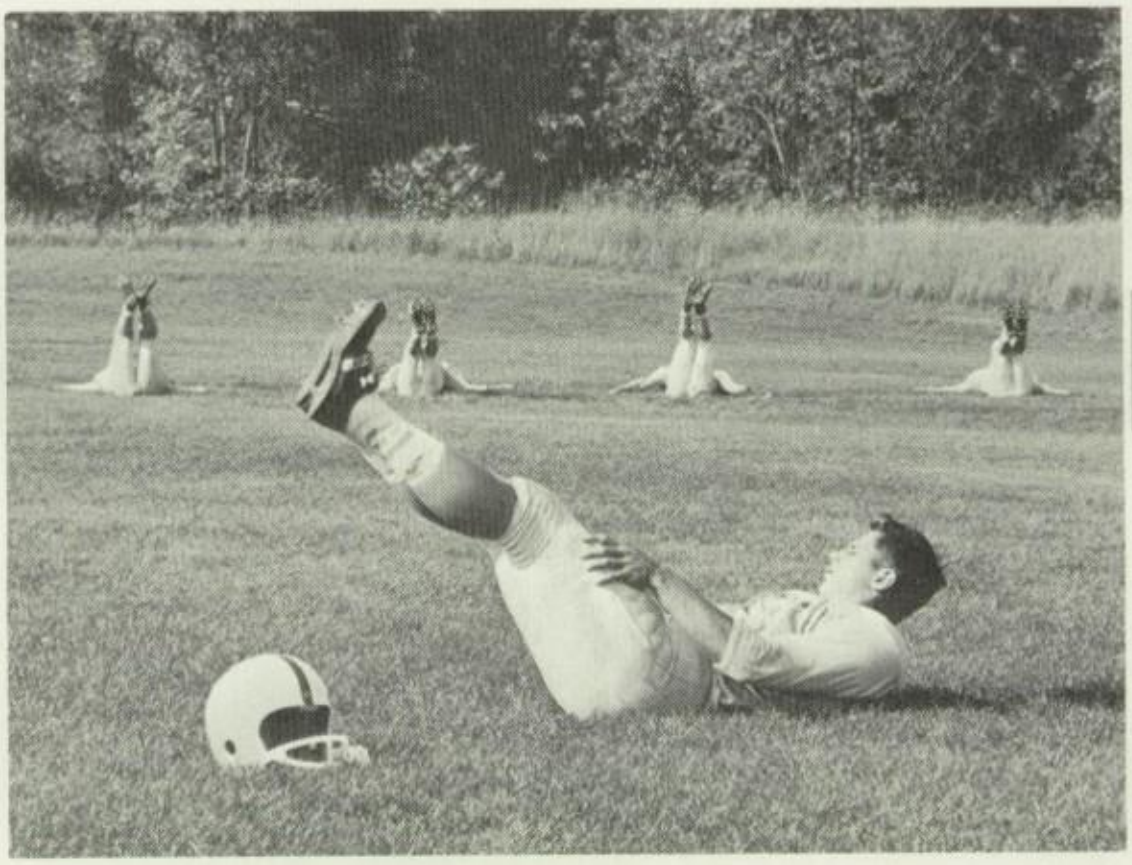
We Become a Part of the Pattern



We become a part of the pattern by joining, participating, mixing, and trying to be someone. We are the Pirates. Our extra time is filled with the games, dances, clubs, the cafeteria, the lobby, the floats, and with luck--the harbor. From this we find our friends and form our circles. We find independence as well as conformity and encounter the idiosyncracies of people. We establish a reputation that reflects our character and values. We judge and are judged.

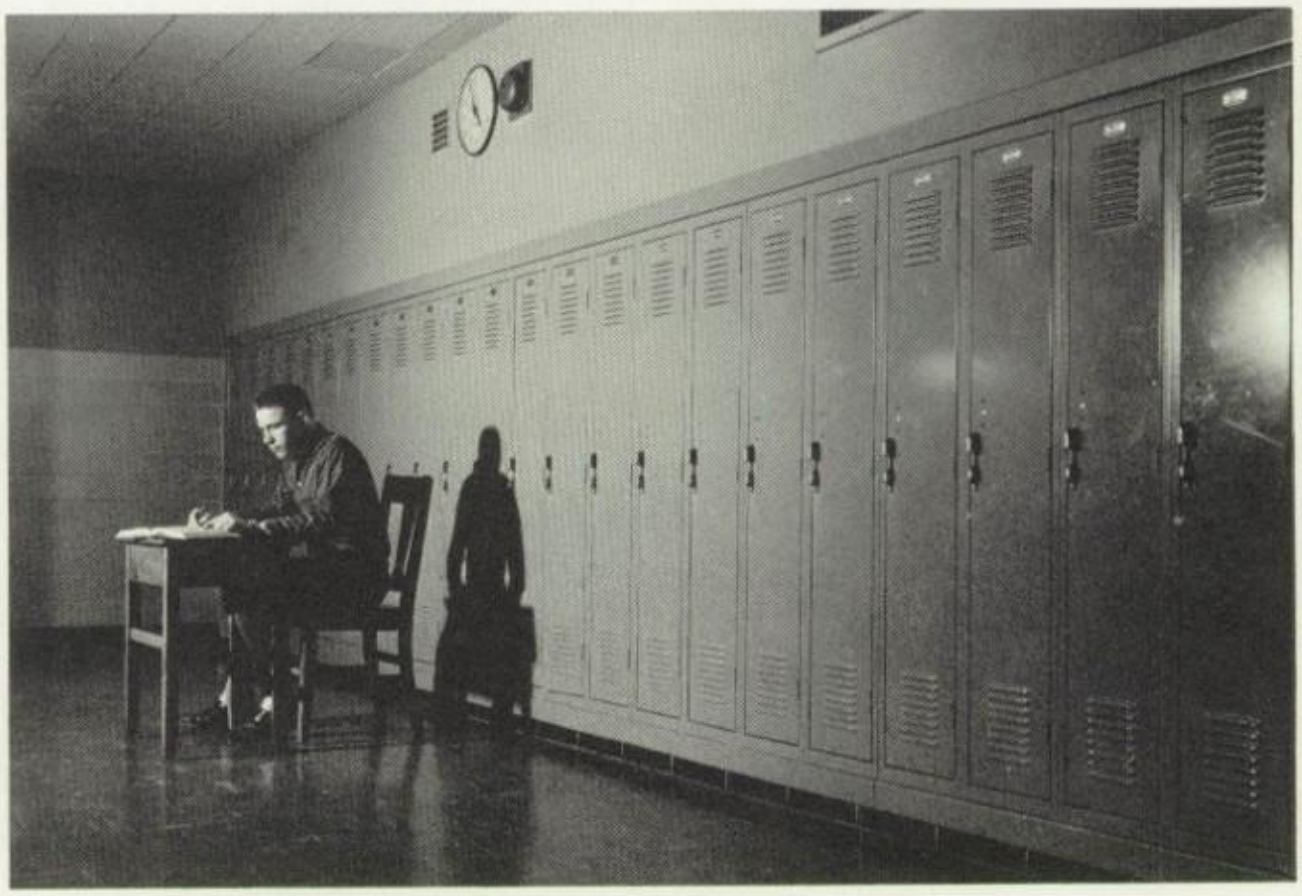
We Stretch Our Minds

As Well As Our Muscles

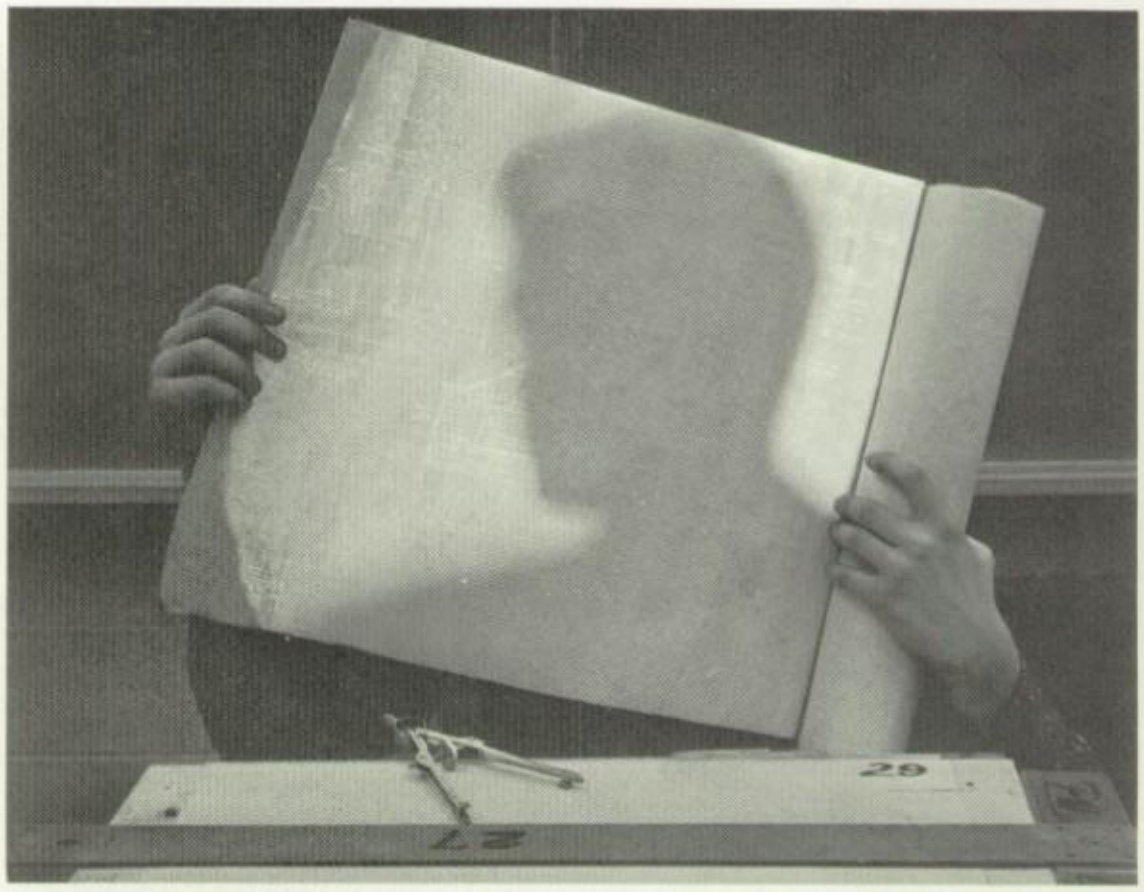


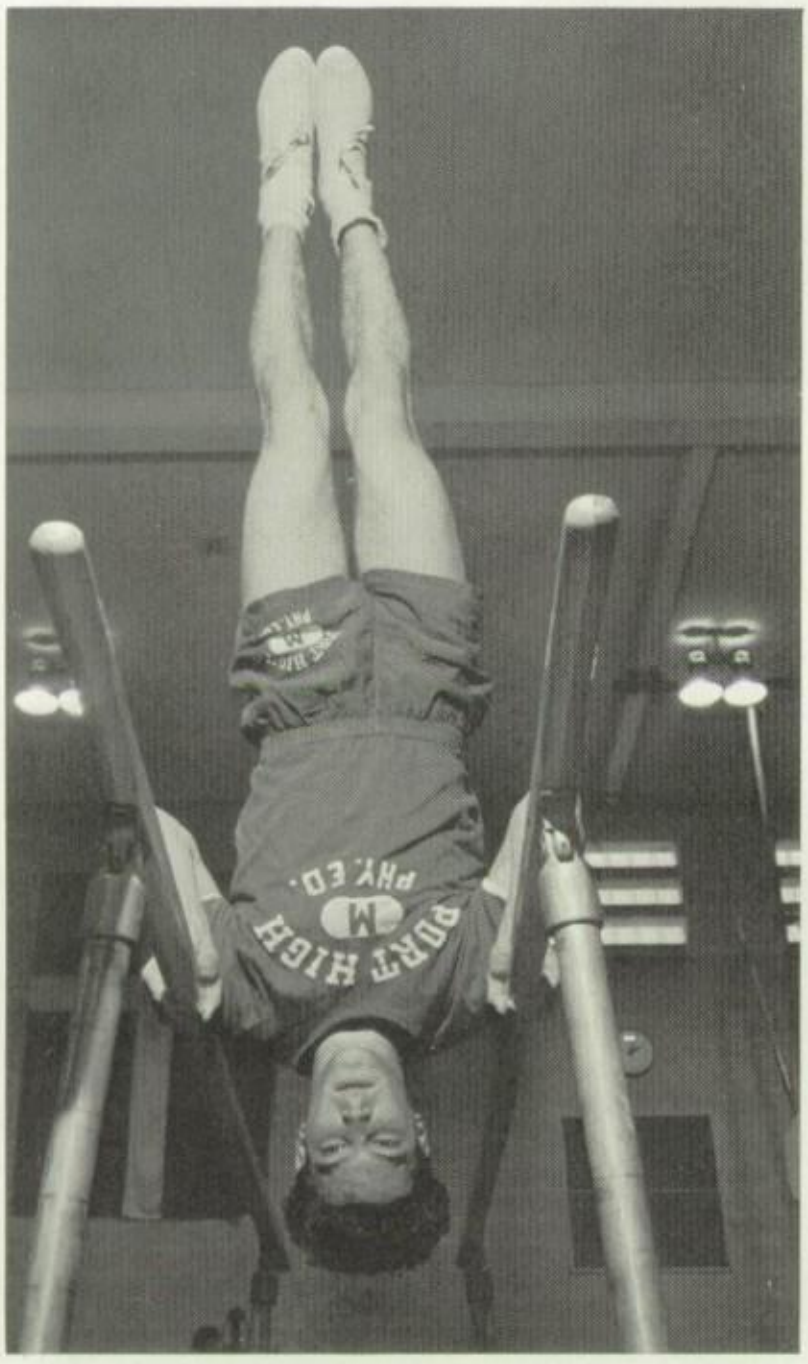
We grasp understandings about the atmosphere of high school. Listening, talking, thinking, talking, walking, talking, seeing, being . . . all in the scheme. We then arrive at our habits and attitudes . . . hard work, homework, slow work, no work.

We have the development of physical and mental health. Curiosity and imagination are the signs of health. We stretch our minds as well as our muscles. We try to set rigid standards for our bodies and exercise our intellectual capacities. All being essential to learning and a significant part of the goals we seek. Our struggles, our strivings, our reasonsing, our discovery, and our decisions and well being depend upon this health.



Then with patience and push we develop skills. All the grind, the studying, the practicing, the rehearsals, the bent backs, despair and sore eyes seem to fade. We suddenly begin to master and enjoy . . . effective use of speaking, writing or computing . . . it could be passing gymnastics or finishing a dress that climaxes a struggle. We see and feel something that has changed within ourselves and accept it . . . with humility or arrogance.





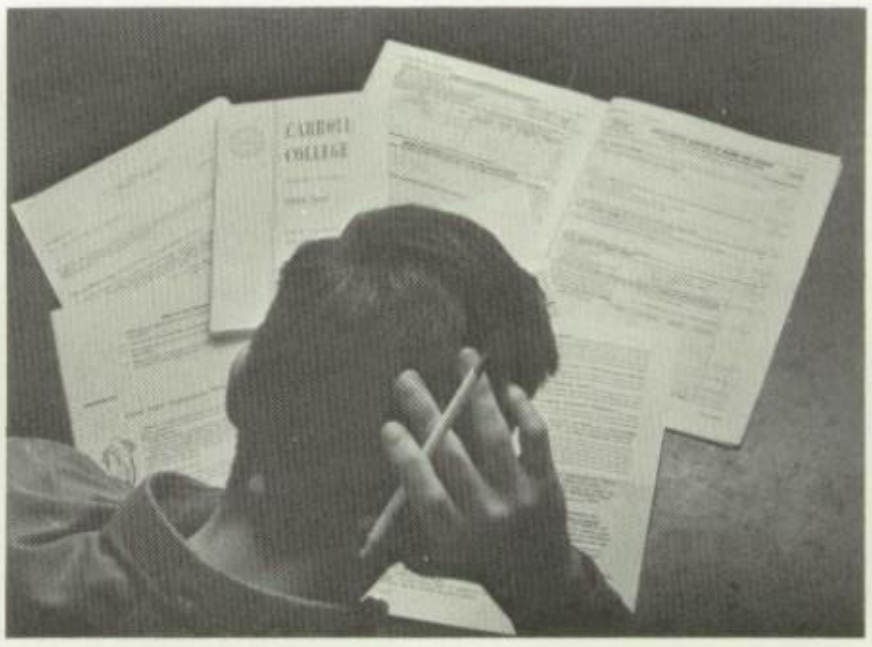
Then with Patience and Push

We Develop Skills

We Want to Maintain

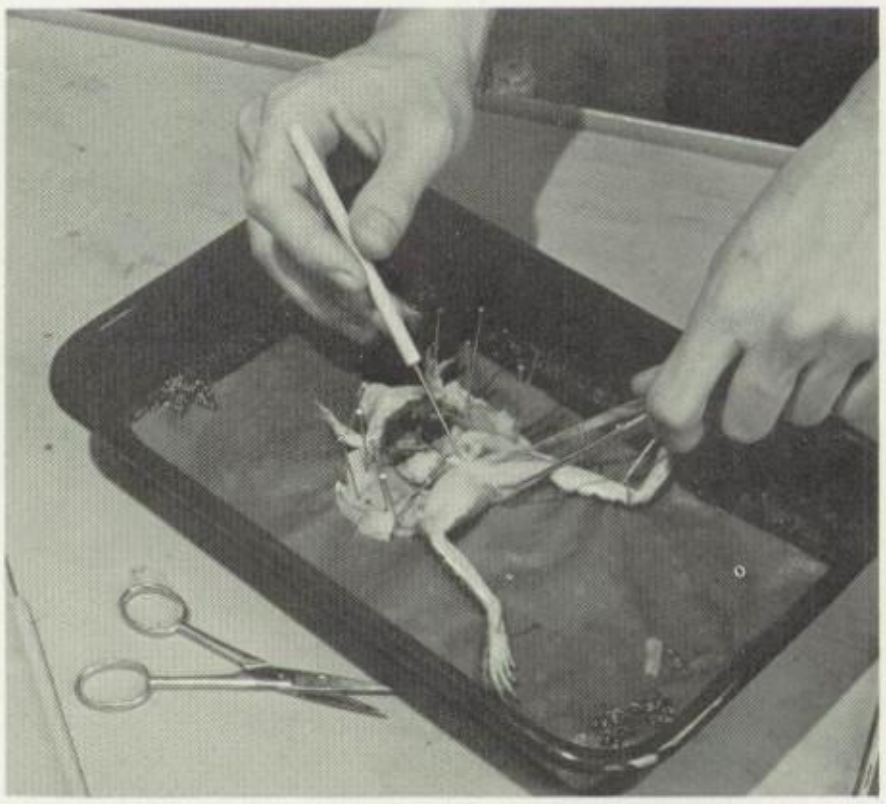
Never before has citizenship meant making so many educated decisions, so frequently, as in our times of crises. We not only absorb ideals and principles but also begin to discharge civic responsibilities. We see the reasons and want to be an intelligent member of the community and nation. We study American problems, follow the market, from political parties, campaign, vote and listen to others. We want to maintain the foundation of our heritage.

The Foundation of Our Heritage



So We May Search

In the space of today we want to explore. We desire the spark of newness and vastness in fascination. We desire exposure to many fields and ideas, so we may search . . . for the truth of the sphere about us--for a field of interest, a college, a career, a life. We want to use our creative powers and developments. From under the suffocating mass of knowledge . . . there comes an unexpected direction--some order and pattern . . . there comes a way to turn . . . a door opens to us so that we may find our place in the mass.



Administration and Academics

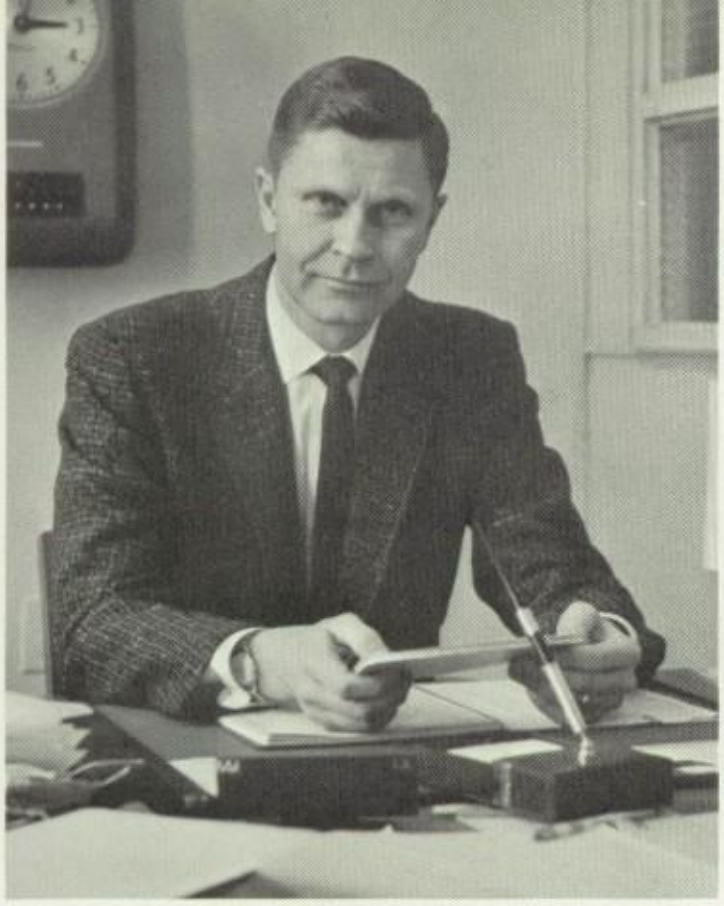
SUPERINTENDENT

The school board, as elected representatives, with the superintendent of schools determine the philosophy and practice of our system. They are Mr. Edward Adams, Mr. Raymond Schaefer, Chairman--Dr. George Savage, Mrs. Hugh Greathouse, Superintendent--Mr. Frank Hoehn, and Mr. Joseph Schmidt.

Administration

Our Administration has provided a complex of fine buildings, well-equipped classrooms, and even more important, a large curricula, well-qualified faculty and a prevalent scholastic atmosphere. Port Washington serves as the center of education for a large district. As the physical expansion meets the demands of increased enrollment, the policies keep pace. The academics of our age have been a product of gradual advancement and administrative direction. Continued experimentation and evaluation will show the way to new and improved methods to be utilized.

The head of the high school, our principal, Mr. Douglas Ritchie is our closest contact with administrative officials. He is the leader, the counselor, the regulator and announcement maker. The demands of students, the pressure of parents and general communications all must be handled along with the conferences and complex responsibilities of his office.



With the establishment of a junior-senior high school this fall, Mr. John Fredrickson, as assistant principal, assumes some of the administrative duties and handles the affairs of the junior high.

Typing, filing, distributing mail and maintaining rapport between student, faculty, and Mr. Fredrickson fill Miss Edna Shaw's active day.

Mrs. Rita Schmitz (left), the superintendent's secretary, tends the high school financial business and keeps the books balanced. Miss Carol Goebel (right), secretary to Mr. Ritchie, records grades and transcripts. In addition she aids the guidance department in their voluminous correspondence. Most of the school's financial matters pass through the capable hands of Mrs. Louise Ross (below). She manages books for the school board, does general accounting work and distributes faculty checks twice each month.

Even before the eight o'clock bell, the Office Staff serves the student body--selling lunch tickets, bus tickets, writing supplies and paperbacks. These tasks completed, they begin their specific duties only to be hourly interrupted by someone who needs a tardy excuse. Increased enrollment has added two secretaries--one in the high school and the other in the junior high. After the 3:13 bell, these workers are sorting mail, balancing cash and straightening up for tomorrow.

At least once a month the English Department meets to discuss its curriculum. Mr. John Angelos, Chairman--Mr. Milton Bleeke, Miss Virginia Holz, Mrs. Shirley Runkel, Miss Alyce Van Roy, Miss Carol Slomka, Mr. Michael Price are present.

Languages

Our $12,000 language lab installed in 1961 is a visible reminder of our school system's response to the demands of current trends.

The oral method of learning a foreign language--an educational upheaval of the last decade--develop the natural accent and sentence pattern of a native speaker. Thirty listening booths and several recording stations allow the instructor to monitor the individual's response to pronunciation on tapes and records.

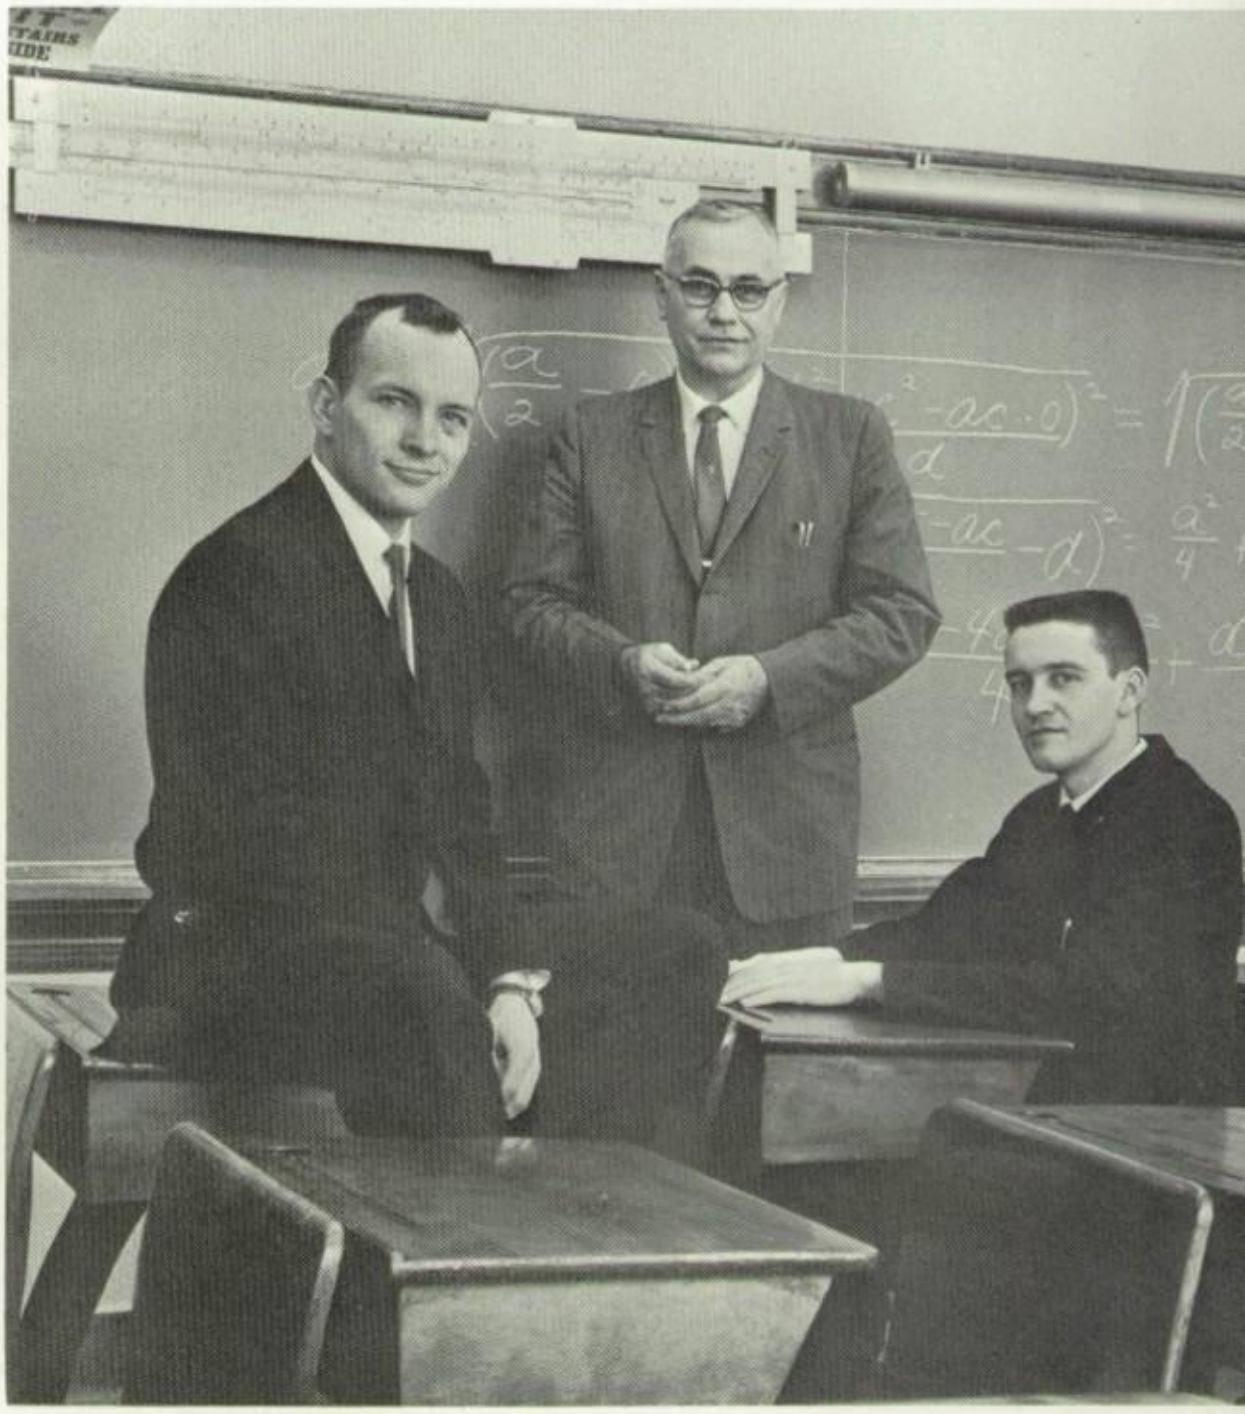
This basic oral understanding facilitates the classroom explanation of grammatical construction. The Language Department now offers four languages--Latin, German, Spanish and French.

Momentarily stepping into the student's position in the lab are Mr. Fred Picard, Mr. William Breister, Mr. Gene Samse and Miss Alyce Van Roy as Miss Lona Foster (above) checks their responses.

English

We continue to struggle to express ourselves with four years of English required for every student. The basics of spelling, composition, grammar, vocabulary, and literature are taught and retaught until we begin to master their use. The trend seems to be utilizing paperback books, especially on the senior level with such classics as: HAMLET, THREE PLAYS, A DEATH IN THE FAMILY, OX-BOW INCIDENT, MACBETH, RETURN OF THE NATIVE, OEDIPUS REX, and CONNECTICUT YANKEE. This course in itself is supplemented with films from a humanities series, lectures on semantics and a study of English literature and writers.

Similarly, all classes filled a year with reading programs and studies in various areas . . . examples such as the juniors with MOBY DICK, THE SCARLET LETTER, OUR TOWN, sophomores with JULIUS CAESAR, SILAS MARNER, freshmen with Greek mythology and HUCKLEBERRY FINN. These are far from all. Probably reams of paper and dozens of red pencils are consumed on the themes, book reports and poetry that round out the course.



A set of analytical thinkers in the faculty is our Mathematics Department consisting of Mr. Donald Lyndahl, Chairman-- Mr. Clarence DeGroot, Mr. Allen Urness and Mr. Donald Siebold.

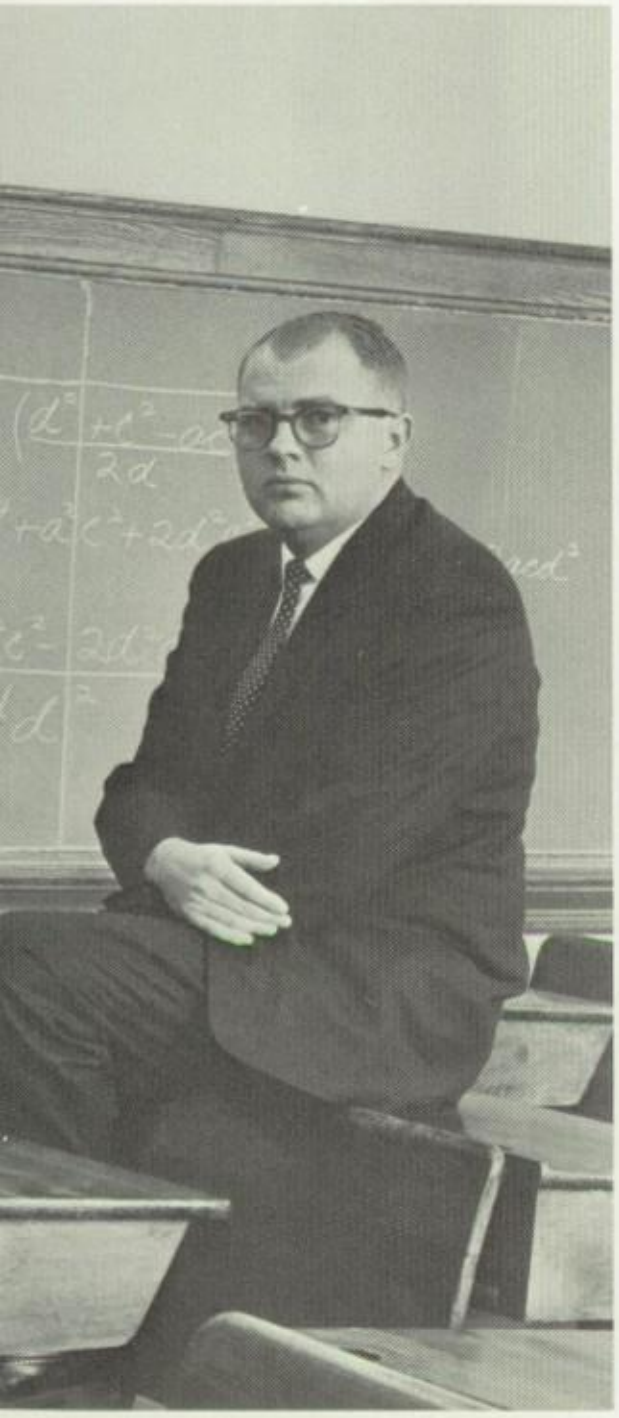
Mathematics and Sciences

In a changing world, mathematics is changing too. The importance of math in today's ever-broadening universe demands a complete four year curriculum. New areas such as rubber-sheet geometry, vectors, equalities, inequalities or set theories are being added to keep pace. The level of algebra, geometry, trigonometry, and calculus are being raised. The study has become more comprehensive and diversified.

We develop a system of orderly and logical thinking. An appreciation for mathematics, the language of the sciences, is a valuable asset in trying to understand the more and more technological newscasts and reports we hear and read.

Parallel is the revolution of the sciences We live in a universe of exotic metals, plastics and computers. Electronics and the atomic age have given us new dimensions to cope with. We hear of . . . billions for NASA, astronauts, IBM developments, atomic electricity, ICBM's, oceanography, and research on a vast scale.

Our sciences study the fundamentals of these fields through physics and chemistry. Double labs, term papers, experiments, and projects prove the impetus for our investigation of forces, motion crystals, emulsoids, electricity, sound, light, atomic energy, bases, salts, acids, fusion and fission. Not just gadgetry or technology, mechanics or mystery, but an intellectual challenge to answer our curiosities in an exact and logical manner. There are more than material benefits to a scientific attitude.



Mr. Gordon Gatzke, advanced biology instructor, enjoys his classes and the area of biology. Natural science is a favorite because of its closeness to the forces of our environment. The fascination of the living and organic are inspiring to us.

Scientists--Mr. Thomas J. Thomas, Chairman--Mr. Albert Nielson and Mr. Roland Vertz--combine efforts to investigate.

Civic leaders starting at 12 o'clock include Mr. Robert Heaps, Mr. James Murray, Mrs. Helen Hugunin, Mr. Fredrick Schaefer, and Mr. Walter Karst.

Social Sciences

Our Social Science Department instituted changes on the junior and senior level with the innovation of the new lecture-seminar program. With the efforts of Mr. Karst, Mr. Heaps and Mr. Murray, we have a better idea of what to expect in college. The new overhead projector shows charts, clippings, illustrations and maps to a lecture session. Films effectively recreate periods of history and outside speakers supplement the lectures.

Today our department stresses an understanding of the basic concepts and principles of social science rather than placing the major emphasis on dates and facts. Seminars have given us the chance to orient discussions. Many hours are spent airing our feelings on contraversial issues.

Business Education

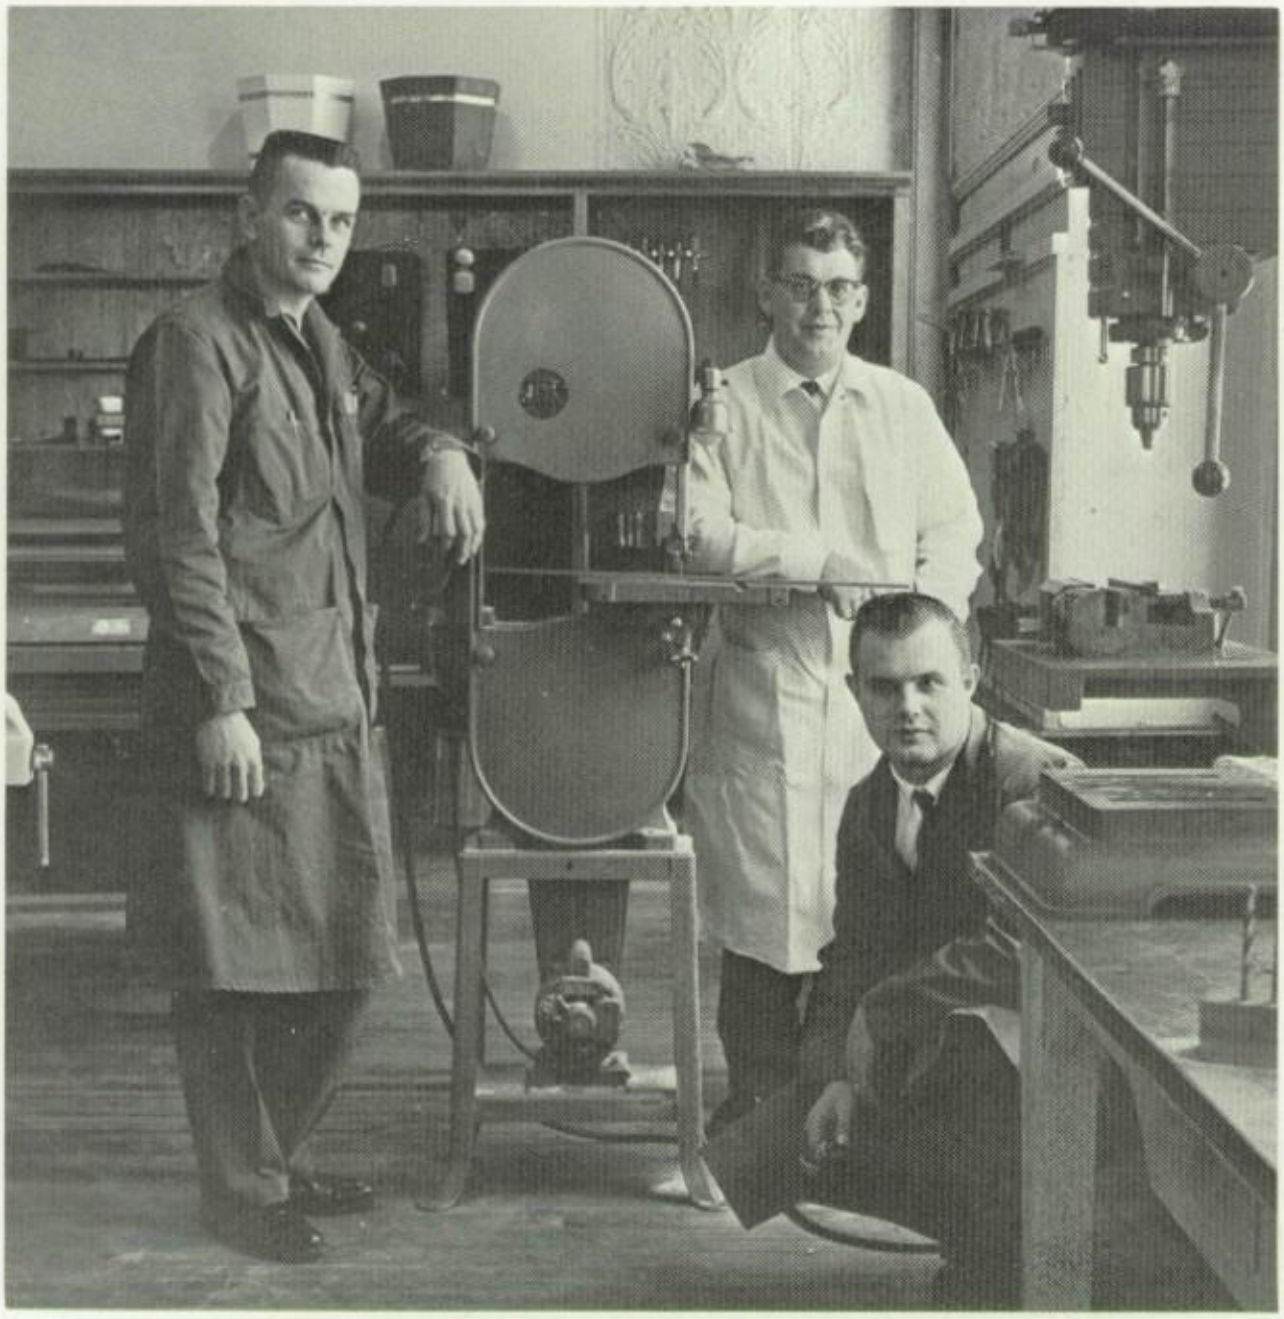
A new member of the faculty, Miss Rosemary Haskey, puts to practice what she teaches in her sections of typing and shorthand.

The newly acquired offset machine prints all letterheads, bulletins, pictures, and the school newspaper. Here Miss Mary Liz Trewyn, PIRATE advisor, demonstrates its use to Monica Gigante and Joyce Hubing, co-editors of the PIRATE.

Mr. Dale Tessmer, bookkeeping instructor, uses the most practical method for a long column of figures.

Accuracy, speed and efficiency are the three basic skills acquired by graduates of the Business Education Department. Office practice offers those planning a career in the business field an additional year of typing and shorthand. Business majors also find bookkeeping an essential course in grasping the financial management of a company.

Typing students become experienced on both manual and new IBM electric typewriters. Besides taking timed writings, and setting up business letters, there are the fundamentals of writing term papers, book reports, themes, easily applicable to other studies.



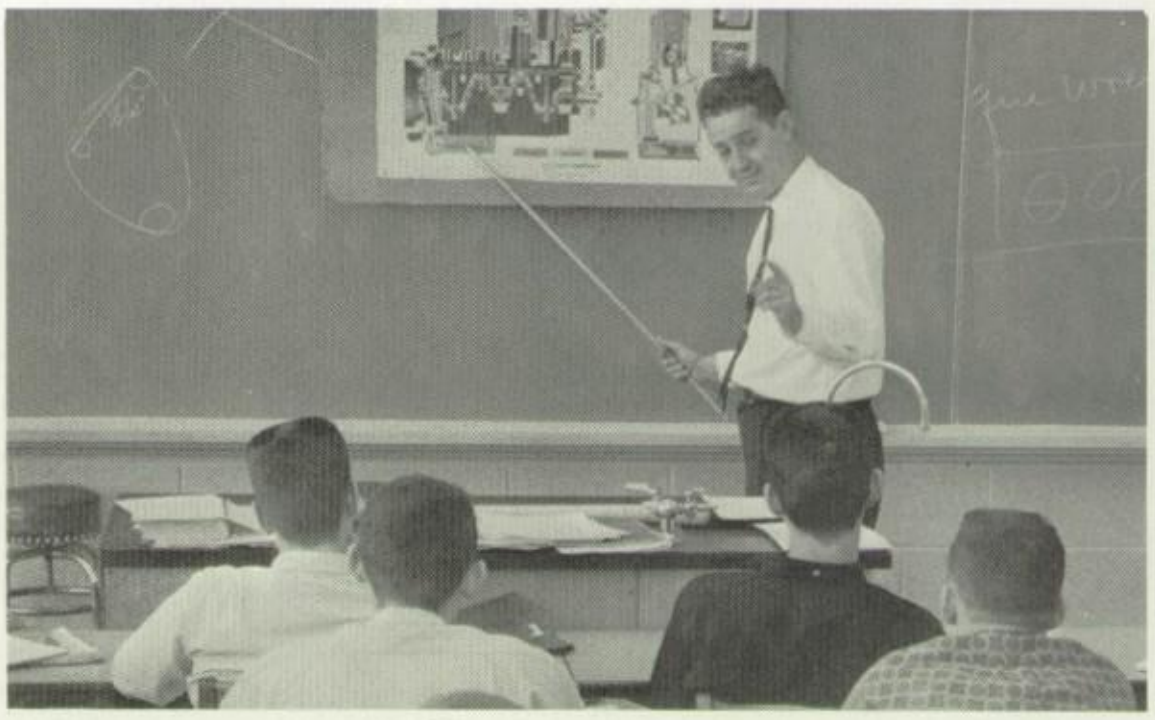
A classic study of man and machinery; Mr. Lyle Teppen, Mr. Howard Michaelson, and Mr. Richard Rokus.

Offered through the cooperative effort of the high school and the vocational school, our Industrial Arts Department can present a large selection of courses. They range from woodworking to metal shop, including mechanical drawing and architectural drawing and blue print reading. The courses offer exploritory work.

Many of us will pursue vocational careers. Work can be practically applied and supplies opportunity for a realistic background.

Industrial Arts

Mr. Arthur Kelm provides the studies in agriculture; a man outstanding in his field.



In preparation for farming or industry our Agriculture Department offers a four-year course in animal husbandry, general shop work and a basic understanding of bookkeeping. The 1956 addition includes a modern well-equipped shop and facilities utilized in today's courses.

In their freshman English classes students learn the decoding of the Dewey Decimal system to find a book or locate reference materials. Sometime during the year we employ its facilities for solving a problem or relaxing with a magazine.

We all realize the importance of a good library. Mr. James Kramer, the new librarian, has done much with the decorum of our library.

Library

Mr. Robert Wallace trains teen-agers to drive correctly. We envy his out-of-doors job during Indian Summer and balmy spring days, but leave him to his work as ice and snow appear.

Home Economics

Miss Mary Benesh and Mrs. Charles Behnke value their shiny kitchen and insist that students keep it that way.

Although the three years are largely devoted to the basic sewing and culinary skills, a portion of each year in Home Economics is spent considering other phases of homemaking.

With the 1956 addition this department acquired a sewing room, dining area, regular classroom, and new kitchen in which the appliances are periodically replaced with the most modern available.

With the miles of highway, multitude of trucks and fleets of cars--the vastness of traffic and its complication have necessitated Driver's Education. Required at the sophomore level, this course promotes better driving among students and trains them to be better prepared in the base of emergencies.

Classrooms overlooking Webster Street afford a view of student drivers perfecting their skill at trying to stop on a hill.

Art Music

As inspiration for his students, Mr. Frank Braun displays the works of the masters.

An outlet for our expression is centralized in the Art Department headed by Mr. Frank Braun. Today's course not only advises students in artistic endeavors but also offers the opportunity to become acquainted with and appreciate good art. By developing the creative powers, the department prepares us for a possible career in either the commercial or fine art fields.

Development of individual talents either vocal or instrumental concerns the Music Department. A new bandroom contains the facilities to aid our respective musical field through the availibility of special practice rooms.

Student interest combined with the equipment and able instruction is producing the talent we see exhibited at games, in parades, in contests and at concerts.

Band director Mr. John Kimbal and chorus director Mrs. Diane Madsen find the solo and ensemble tournaments rewarding but hectic.

Reading

Since Mrs. Blanche Alder joined our system, she has shown great concern for the individual student and his reading skills. Besides holding classes, she has opened the book store where she encourages reading for enjoyment as well as education.

Guidance

Ninth graders have their own problems and take them to Mrs. Dorothy Huber, their guidance counselor. Programs and adjustments come from her office.

The Guidance Program aids us in making adjustments to the various developmental activities that we meet--educational, vocational, social, civic and personal.

During the school year each student is counseled. In such meetings test scores are interpreted, records checked for subjects taken and credits earned, and subject selections made for the following year. Concern for the individual student is the department's greatest asset.

Valuable college bulletins and applications are housed in the high school guidance office and are obtained from Mr. Charles Behnke and Mr. Verne Appleman.

Mr. Richard DeMario keeps himself and his students fit through calisthenics and gymnastics.

Physical Education

Department Chairman Mr. John Walstra co-ordinates the entire program into a logical progression of physical skills.

Strenuous athletics proved too much for many of our girls, but not for Miss Katherine Bonner.

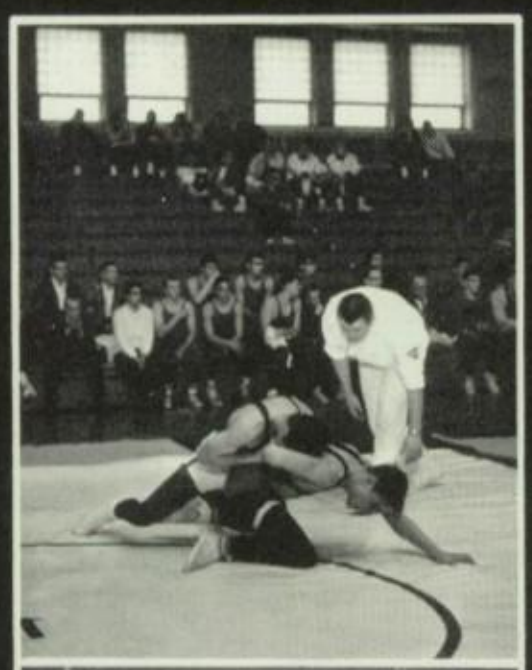
The Physical Education Department places emphasis on a basic skills sports program administered in six-week units covering the seasonal sports--basketball, wrestling, track, tennis, and baseball. The newly added trampoline, parallel bars, horse and the necessary mats provide the basis for units in gymnastics and tumbling. The new frontier has placed physical fitness on the priority list of fundamentals in total education.

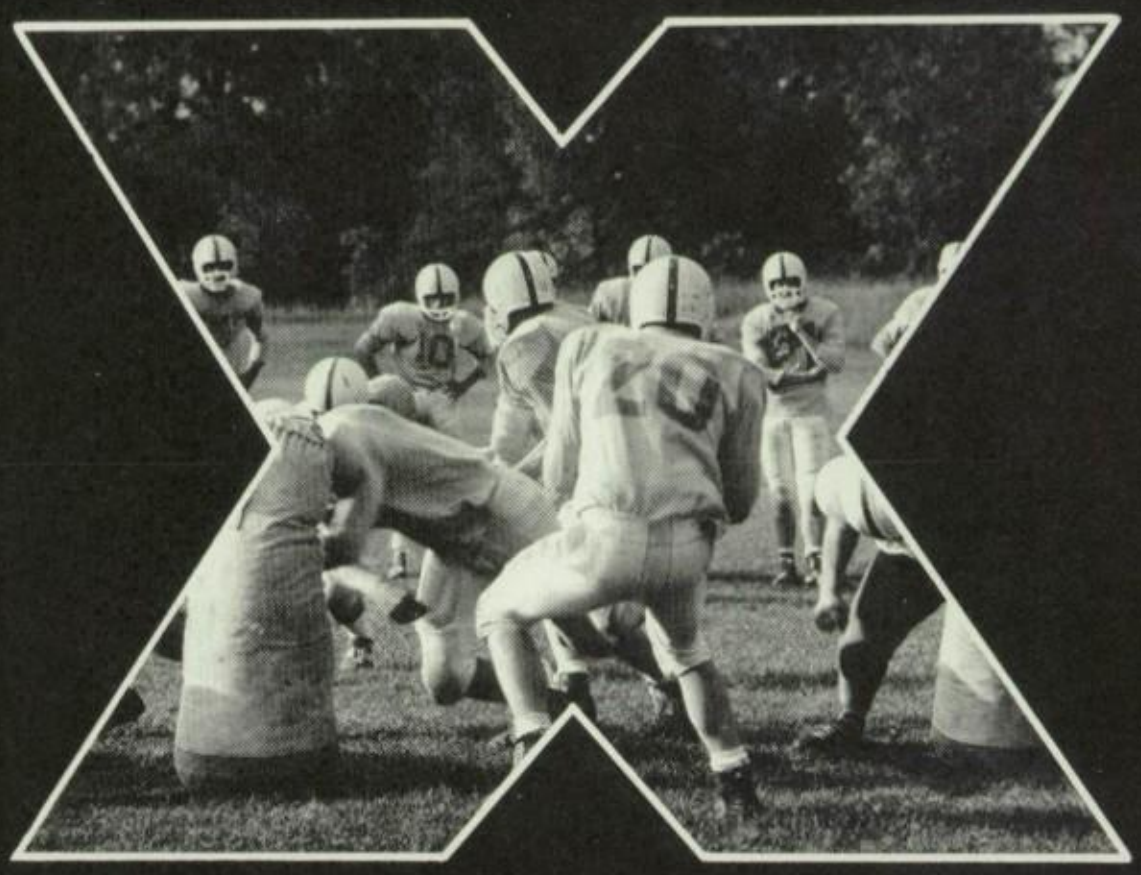
Services

Muddy uniforms after a football game are sent to Mrs. Howard Beeckler, pictured here, and Mrs. E. Robinson, the laundry ladies who operate our school laundry. Baskets of towels, gym suits and uniforms make their way to and from their quarters.

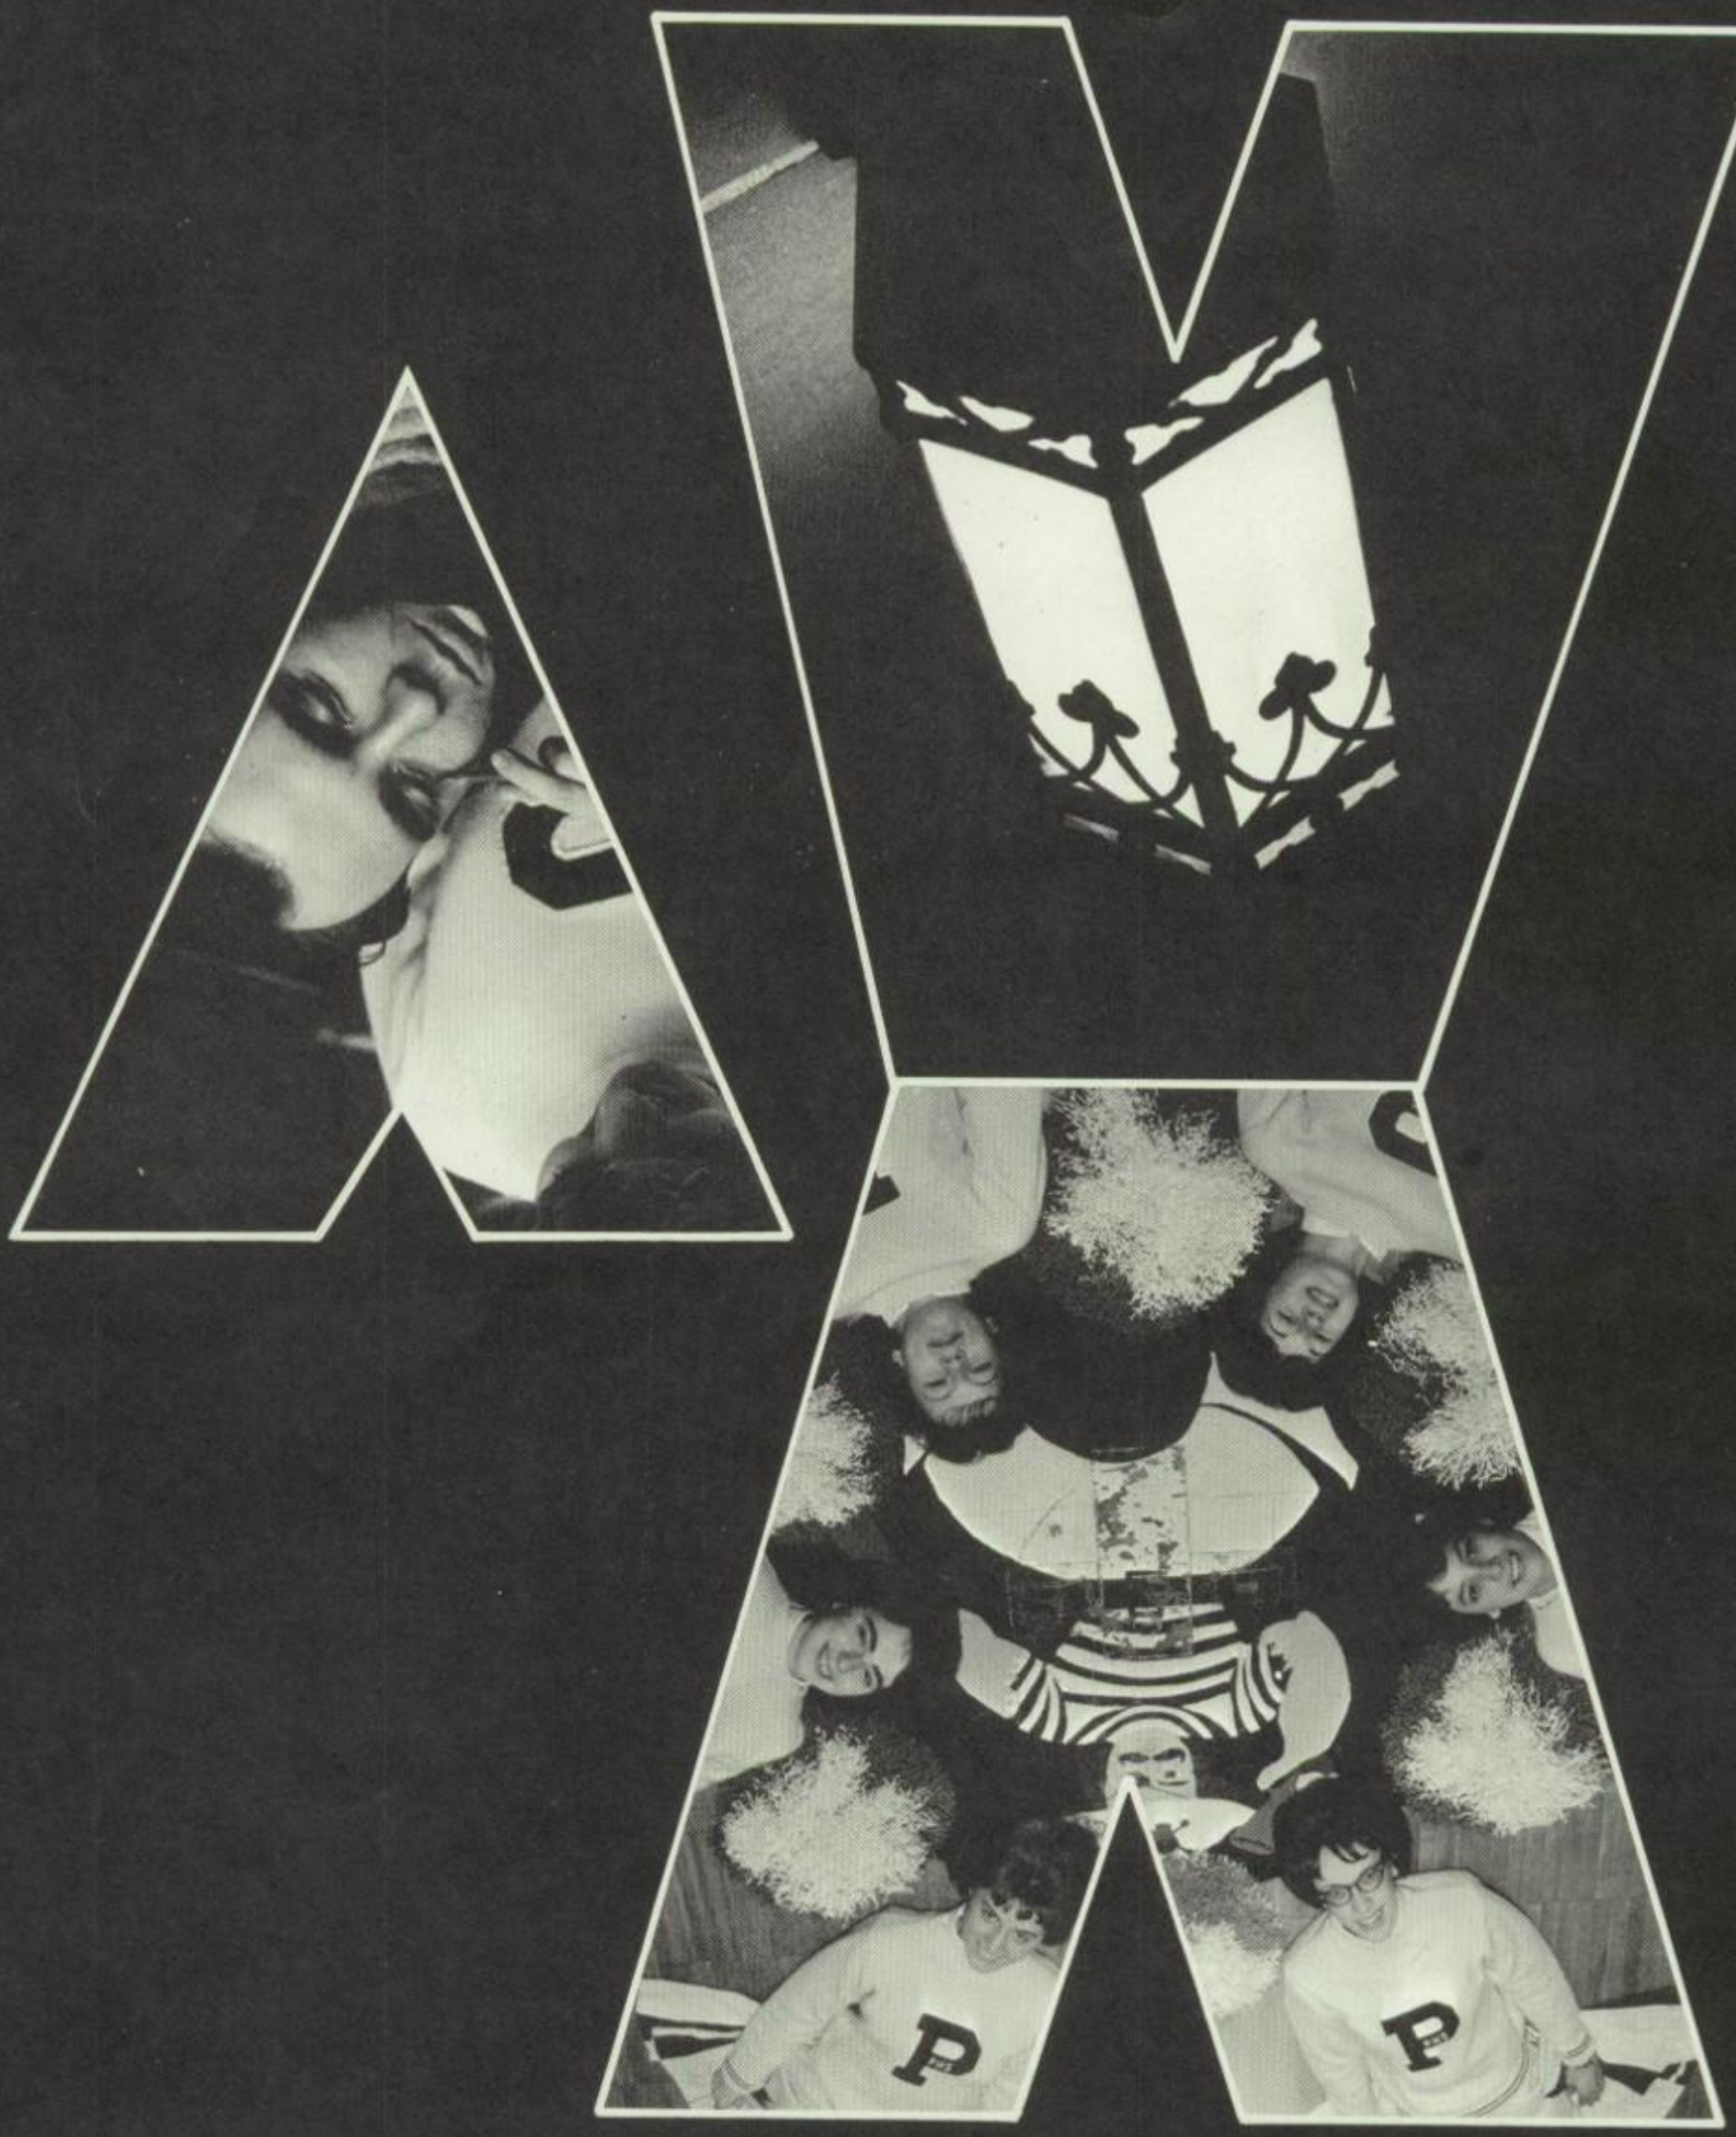
Besides the responsibility of well-balanced meals, fulfilling state requirements, the cooks must be on time for two lunch periods of students with voracious appetites. Planning, preparing and ordering encompass their duties. Mrs. Bertha Schneider orders the necessary staples as Mrs. Herman Bartelt and Mrs. Harrer prepare for tomorrow.

The custodians divide and conquer a total of fifty rooms in addition to hallways, lavatories, cafeteria and gymnasium. On other duties as disassembling the new bleachers they combine talents; Mr. Francis Swatek, Mr. Ray Theisen, Mr. George Bode, and Mr. John Bink.





Portfolio



Clubs

Areas that interest us we explore further through many of the clubs. They present specific opportunities of expression in the world of curricular generalness. We enjoy the informality that surrounds the meetings. We find friends among people with common interests. Many behind the scene arrangements and preparations can be traced to club activities.

Ski

Mr. Karst and Mr. DeMario's enthusiasm for skiing rubbed off and with the advent of snow came pleas from the students for someone to supervise their ventures. Along with the fun came instruction, travel, and status. Weekend patch-purchasing and ski-tow-riding parties set out for Wunderburg, Kettle, Morraine and Little Switzerland. After a few outings the students were difficult to distinguish from the experts. Foreground: B. Moon, K. Heinzelman, R. Burton, C. Robinson, C. Jensterle, M. Schanen, M. A. Schanen, P. Elwood, J. Couchet, G. Robbins.

Organizations

The step of sophistication above a club. It means running on a bigger budget, being recognized as a perpetual group and function, giving roles of responsibility, being interested. They also are the stairs the ambitious use.

President Mary Ann Schanen summarizes details of the traditional program with imaginative suggestions offered by Charlie Wilson.

Present members practice the solemn ceremony of initiation for the spring induction. Janice Scholl and Jan Swatek portray page and initiate, respectively, while Karen Schaefer and Ray Hoffmann criticize their measured steps.

STANDING: B. Moon, R. Moon, M. Melcher, J. Anderson, Mr. DeGroot, D. DeGroot, R. Theisen, B. Smith, E. Karrels, J. Allen.

Student Council

Council membership determined by petitioning--instituted this year--attracts those keenly interested in our student government. These people, aware of our school's tensions, create new programs. Clubs now desiring to sponsor a dance must use a gimmick so Port's students will not be faced with "just another one of those dances after the game."

Responding to the Governor's Council on Youth, held every two years, the Council elected four delegates to represent us. The group heard key speeches and discussions on the topic of school drop-outs. SEATED: P. Bostwick, M. Gigante, D. DeGroot. STANDING: B. Smith, Advisor Mr. DeGroot.

Quill and Scroll

International Honorary Society for High School Journalists secure greater recognition of journalism work on the part of the students, school officials, and the community. Members: J. Hubing, P. Bostwick, C. R. Wilson. Advisors: Miss Trewyn, Miss Holz.

PIRATE

Scoops are now within the grasp of our newspaper staff. The off-set machine allows faster, economical, direct, transfer of news from the reporter to the printer to the student. Editors-in-chief Monica Gigante and Joyce Hubing hand over a finished edition so Miss Trewyn can "put the paper to bed."

Moment of truth after a day's labor . . . our photographer--fondly known to us as "Mr. Colonial," known to the tax bureau as Mr. Gene Picard of Colonial Studio, Cedarburg--produces the prints we display in "the book." Miss Virginia Holz of the high school faculty advises, consents, manages, worries, referees, and generally stimulates the production of our yearbook.

The individuals who compose the identity known as this year's annual . . . going in: Mary Heinen, administration; Pat Bialzik, clubs; Rachel Kraus, introduction; Jo Anne Nagrocki, typing; Rita Burton, activities; Sally Bell, graduates; Judy Schils, academics; Mark Melcher, athletics; Mary Miller, organizations; Peggy Bostwick, standard bearer.

Powahiscan

We carefully follow the progress of each POWAHISCAN. We laugh as the editors push groups into lines or explode when schedules without our names are posted. We listen to the typewriters on second floor pound away on a spring night. We always recognize a deadline week without asking. We never understand what the mystic language means with "bleeding" and "cropping" or "layouts" and "copy." We may stumble upon a group of staff plotting the next section and wonder where the inspiration comes from year after year.

We comment on our opinion of how the school was presented or suggest better ways to cover a favorite event. The editors silently acknowledge us, but seem to look beyond our criticism. We almost envy the esoteric joys, humor, and fun in working on "the book."

We occasionally catch rumors of Editor Wilson's cruelty to the staff, but this seems untrue as we see above (really no survivors remain to confirm our suspicions). All systems seem go as Sally Bell proofs, Grace Erickson indexes, Advisor Holz (world traveler) dusts, Gayle Robbins types and Mary Heinen brings the boss's diversified mail, business and personal.

Athletics

Our Port High tradition contains a well-reserved section for school sports. Competition answers the desire we have to utilize our vitality and vigor. There is a tenseness in watching a close game that never ceases to stimulate the avid fan. We instinctively recognize the best performances or the perfect timing and it gives us satisfaction. We love to evaluate the teamwork, the coaching, the victories, or the reasons we lost. Year round the program continues and is followed.

Baseball

The national sport of the United States--baseball opens the series of Port Washington sports. We use the summer vacation to play the games and practice regularly. All of the familiarities of the diamond accompanied each work-out or contest--the disagreed strike, sacrifices, home runs, coaching from the stands, arguments over the umpire's sanity, the bull-pen and the addition of a pitching machine. A winning season was climaxed by a 2-1 loss to West Bend for the title.

Number one spectator sport, number one on the lettermen's list, and number one for contact and stamina-testing--that's football. Football is two practices a day in August heat, pounding away at canvas dummies, pushing loaded sleds, running, push-ups, criticism and self-satisfaction. We feel the aches and cuts that gradually develop, pull at our energy. An elbow in the belly or spikes on our hand or a helmet in the back, all condition our alertness to the game. Rigid rules are enforced for maximum health. Plays are memorized, chalk-talks, and then dozens of dry run-throughs. We spring on the count, tuck the ball under, hold onto the pass, get off the kick . . . and then Friday night. The test is there, we see how well we function.

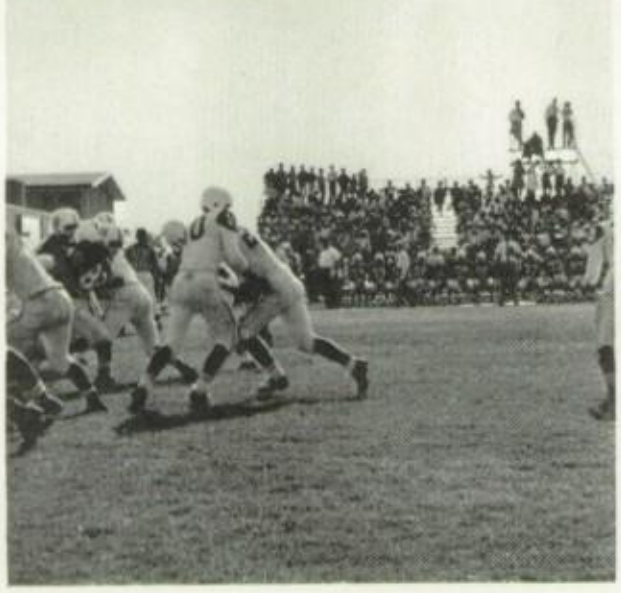
West Bend opened the season with a close loss and Cedarburg ended the season with an overwhelming win for our team. Final tally left us as third in the race. This was Coach Jim Murray's beginning year as head coach. Many of the front line men will be returning for future teams. Junior Varsity prospects are good with only one loss blemishing their record.



Basketball

We are drawn when snow comes to go to the first basketball game. We are ready for the type of action, the quick movement and fast-ball handling. The slow touch of winter and coldness makes us keen for the fast-breaking maneuvers of the squad. We hold our breath for rebounds, wait for the jump, curse at the fouls, and yell when the game is in balance. That net and hardwood floor have become a part of our winter weekends.

Mats and take-downs are an innovation of a few years that now hold us as an audience. We watch the grueling six minutes and then the final exhaustion after a near pin. We scream when shoulder blades of either team near the mat.

We watch proudly as our team goes undefeated and have the conference title. We distinguish ourselves as the state's third-best team and have a state champion of our own.

Track and Field

The same feeling as the ancient Greeks must have experienced passes through us when we view our track and field events. We still thrill at the outstanding runner, the grace and form of a competitior. We recognize the best no matter what school they represent. We take pleasure in observing skilled hurdlers, vaulters, jumpers, shot men and dash or distance runners that form the unity of a Port High team.

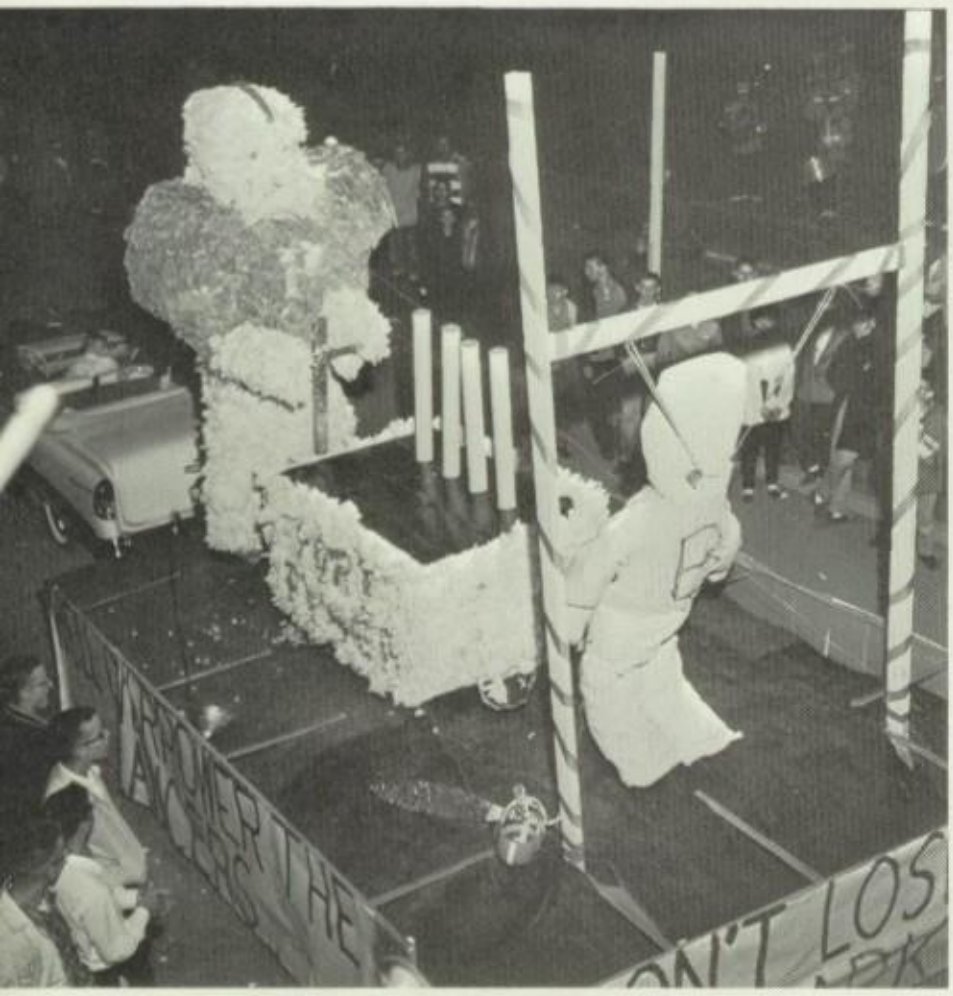
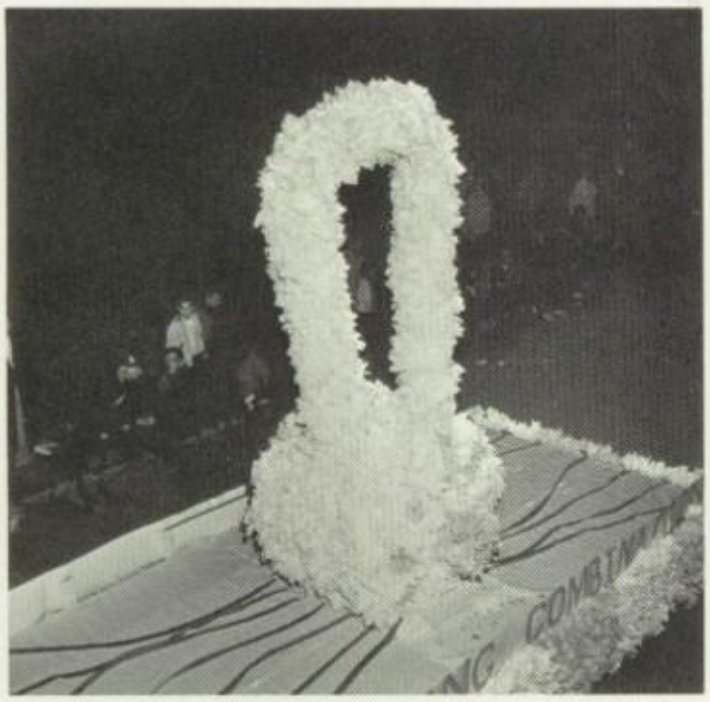
Activities



First place float was the junior's "We'll Overpower the Lancers" equipped with movable, electrified parts and a miniature Port Power Plant.

The sophomores smelled second place with their huge skunk as they declared "We Scent Victory."

The high school version of fraternity, of Broadway, of the Greek orators that provide an outlet. Relief and tension in a single package. The anxious expectation of a date, preparing decorations until the first couples arrive, electing courts, buying flowers, all take their toll of students. We go on to put energy into play productions or heated debates. We polish up for forensics or practice our solo for tournaments. Then all that remains is a vague image with medals, programs, ribbons or a pressed corsage.



The first organized freshman project produced "A Winning Combination."

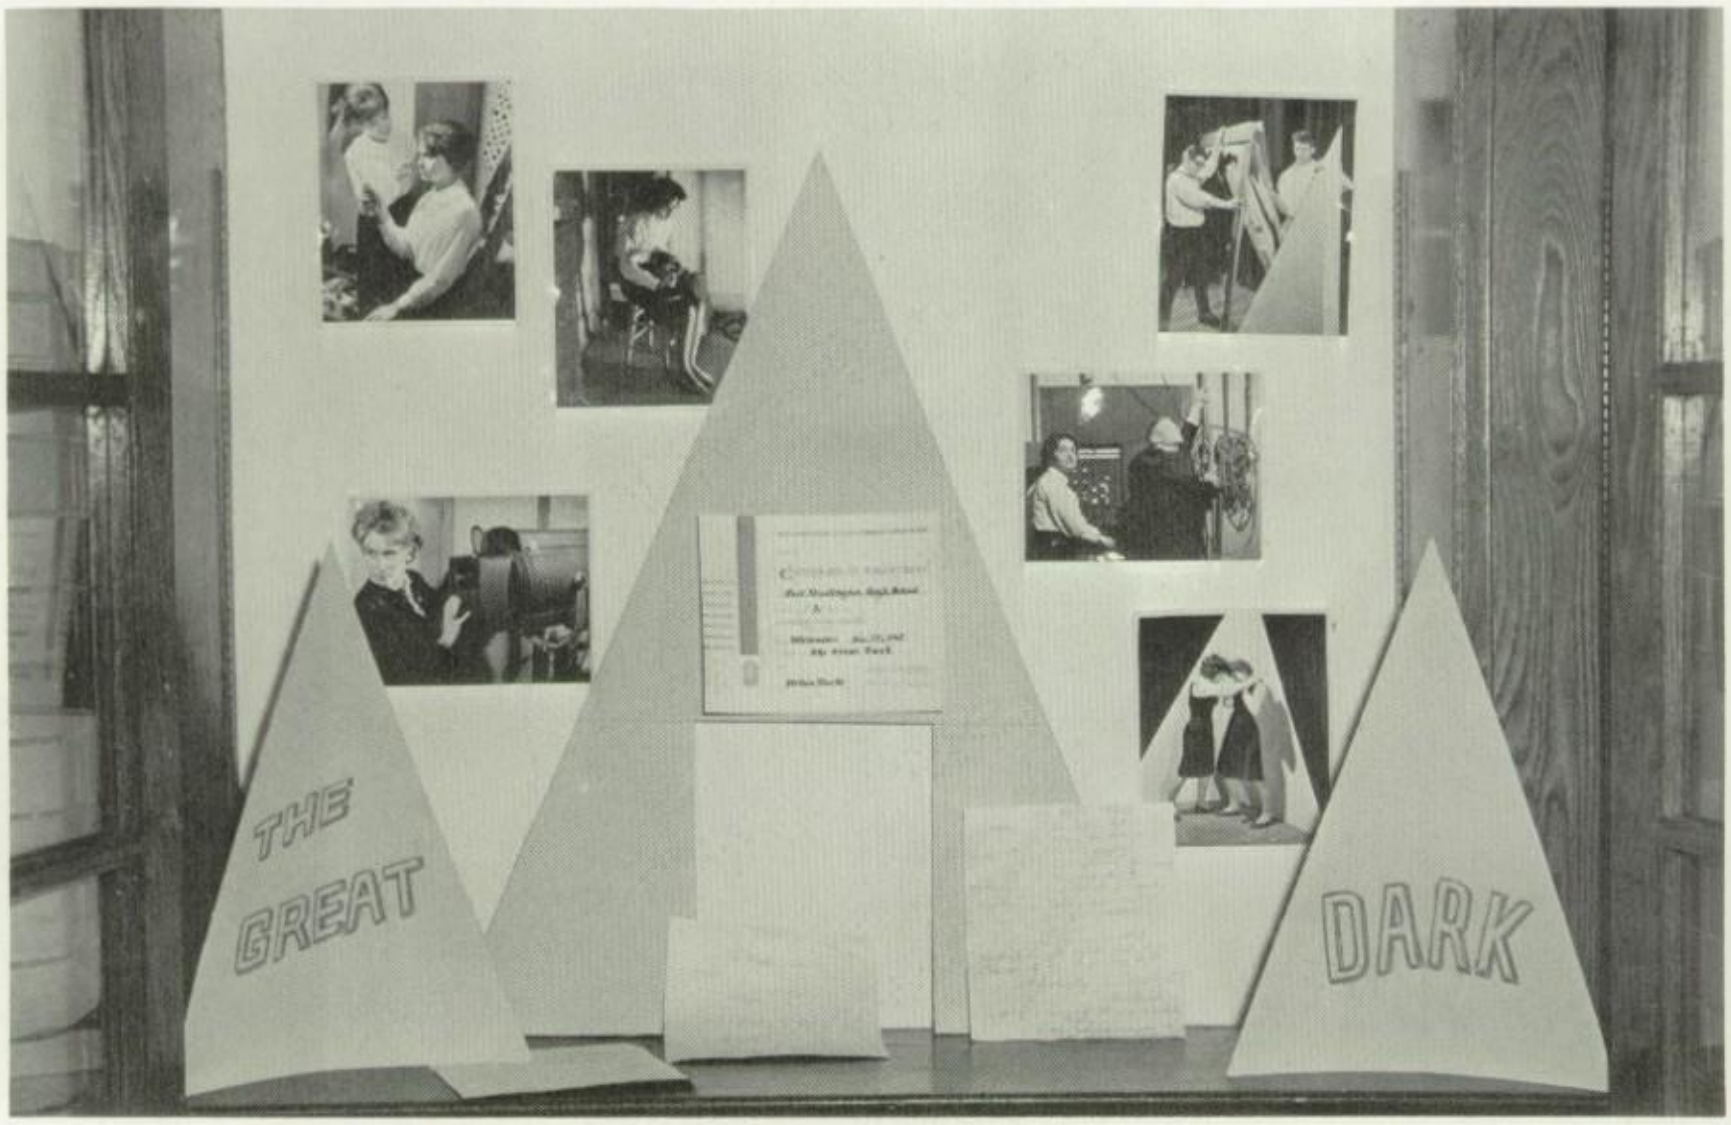
With huge cup and doughnut the seniors expressed their sentiments to the opposition.

Homecoming

We lost the game, the weather was not the best, but homecoming has become part of our school social culture. The gym filled, the orchestra played, and then the climax of the evening with the court marching in. The king and queen come forth . . . the crowning, the kiss, the dance of honor and the remaining time fades until past.

Homecoming Court: J. Bichler and J. Blick, S. Bell, and J. Boland, B. St. Peter and C. Wolf, D. Swatek, and P. Collins, Queen J. Bichler and King M. Melcher.

Competition Play



Coach Milton Bleeke proudly displayed the photographic study of our competition play "The Great Dark." The story portrayed six coal miners' wives after a mine cave in. We abstracted our set with the symbolic triangles of love and divinity. The work spent on interpretation yielded "A" after "A" until the state finals when we received our second consecutive state "B." Nevertheless, the distinction for our school in forensics was increased. Cast and crew: A. Koloeck, E. Rooney, D. Phillips, C. Robinson, D. Ziehr, C. Lindquist, J. Schmit, J. Hill, C. Larson, C. Conard.

"Our Town"

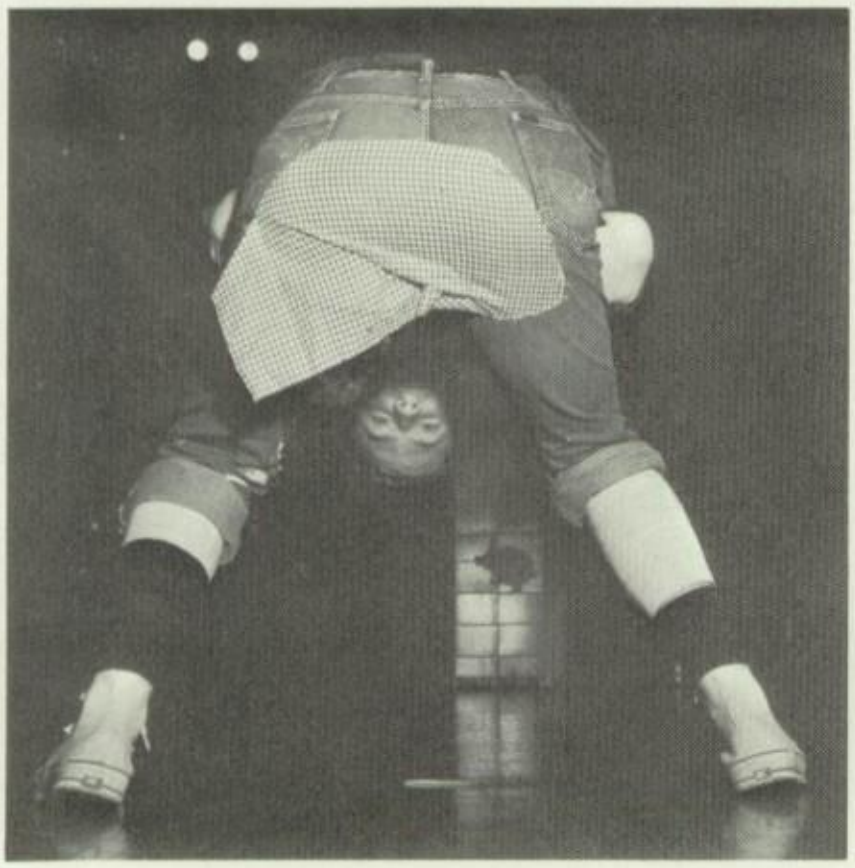
Young George and Emily touched upon a theme for which we tender many feelings. Their moonlight meeting across the yards is vivid in our mind, and yet we saw only Jim Hill and Ellen Rooney on ladders. It was what they said that activated our imaginations.

We watched our actors and actresses carefully as "Our Town" progressed. Grover's Corners, New Hampshire became Port Washington, Wisconsin with the familiar themes of humans and their living. The simple stage of Thornton Wilder allowed us to focus more on the people and listen to what the stage manager was trying to put across. We viewed the characteristic day, young love and finally . . . death. Ranging in mood from heartbreaking cemetery scene to the heartwarming drugstore scenes, this play captured us emotionally and tested our awareness. We paused to ponder our own lives.

The stage manager, Paul Wiening, and milk man, John Dauska, were at opposite ends in types of parts, but we listened carefully to both and commended each.

The cemetery and burial of Emily remains when we leave as we still hear the third and final time of "Bless Be the Tide That Binds."

Sadie Hawkins 1962



Sadie Hawkins, 1962, proved a real "rip-roarin" time. Showing the boys how it's done, our Port High girls grabbed their guys before they had a chance to make dear-hunting plans. Our couples donned tattered blue jeans, father's old shirts, and other fugitives from the ragbag only to find them more tattered and sometimes missing within a few hours. Significantly our "cool" Marryin' Sams performed more ceremonies this year than ever before. Charlie and the boys filed in holding up their Bermudas with suspenders. As the evening ended, our couples rushed out to shock restaurant goers, or to keep someone's parents awake into the wee hours at a private party.

There was nothin' quiet or long about the multiples of marriage our boys threw together.

Our forensic team, co-champions of the Braveland Conference, were principally juniors and seniors, ably supported by a group of talented sophomores. Eleven speakers received A ratings in the conference meet thus qualifying for district competition. The three who advanced to the state finals won gold metals in their categories. Our winners were Susan Solms in four-minute original speech, Mary Jane Scherer in non-original oration and Peter Schmidt in public address. Student Exchange Program

A special snow fall occurred for the arrival of the students from Greenville, Alabama, who bundled tightly in defense. Before the week was over, they became acclimated and were much more familiar with yankeeland.

We traveled to the land of cotton and found it in spring time which pleasantly surprised us. We spent our week meeting people, attending classes, visiting industries, touring the capitol, and learning more about Greenville. We faced segregation and Southern hospitality on their home grounds. We met students and bonds were formed.

Canzona 'd Amore

Through blaxing torches came the fragrance of ferns, cedars and fresh flowers. The perfection of formal Italian gardens and a colorfully lighted fountain left no doubt that Canzona 'd Amore, song of love, would enchant all. In days, the juniors constructed the facade and seeded the gardens that took Rome centuries. We watched the juniors accept their laurels with as much humility as possible.

King Ron Theisen and his queen, Janice Scholl, stop and reflect that the fountain was contrived by three junior-class mechanical wizards.

We relived the days of chariotering Rome. The mural captured the thrill of a past culture.

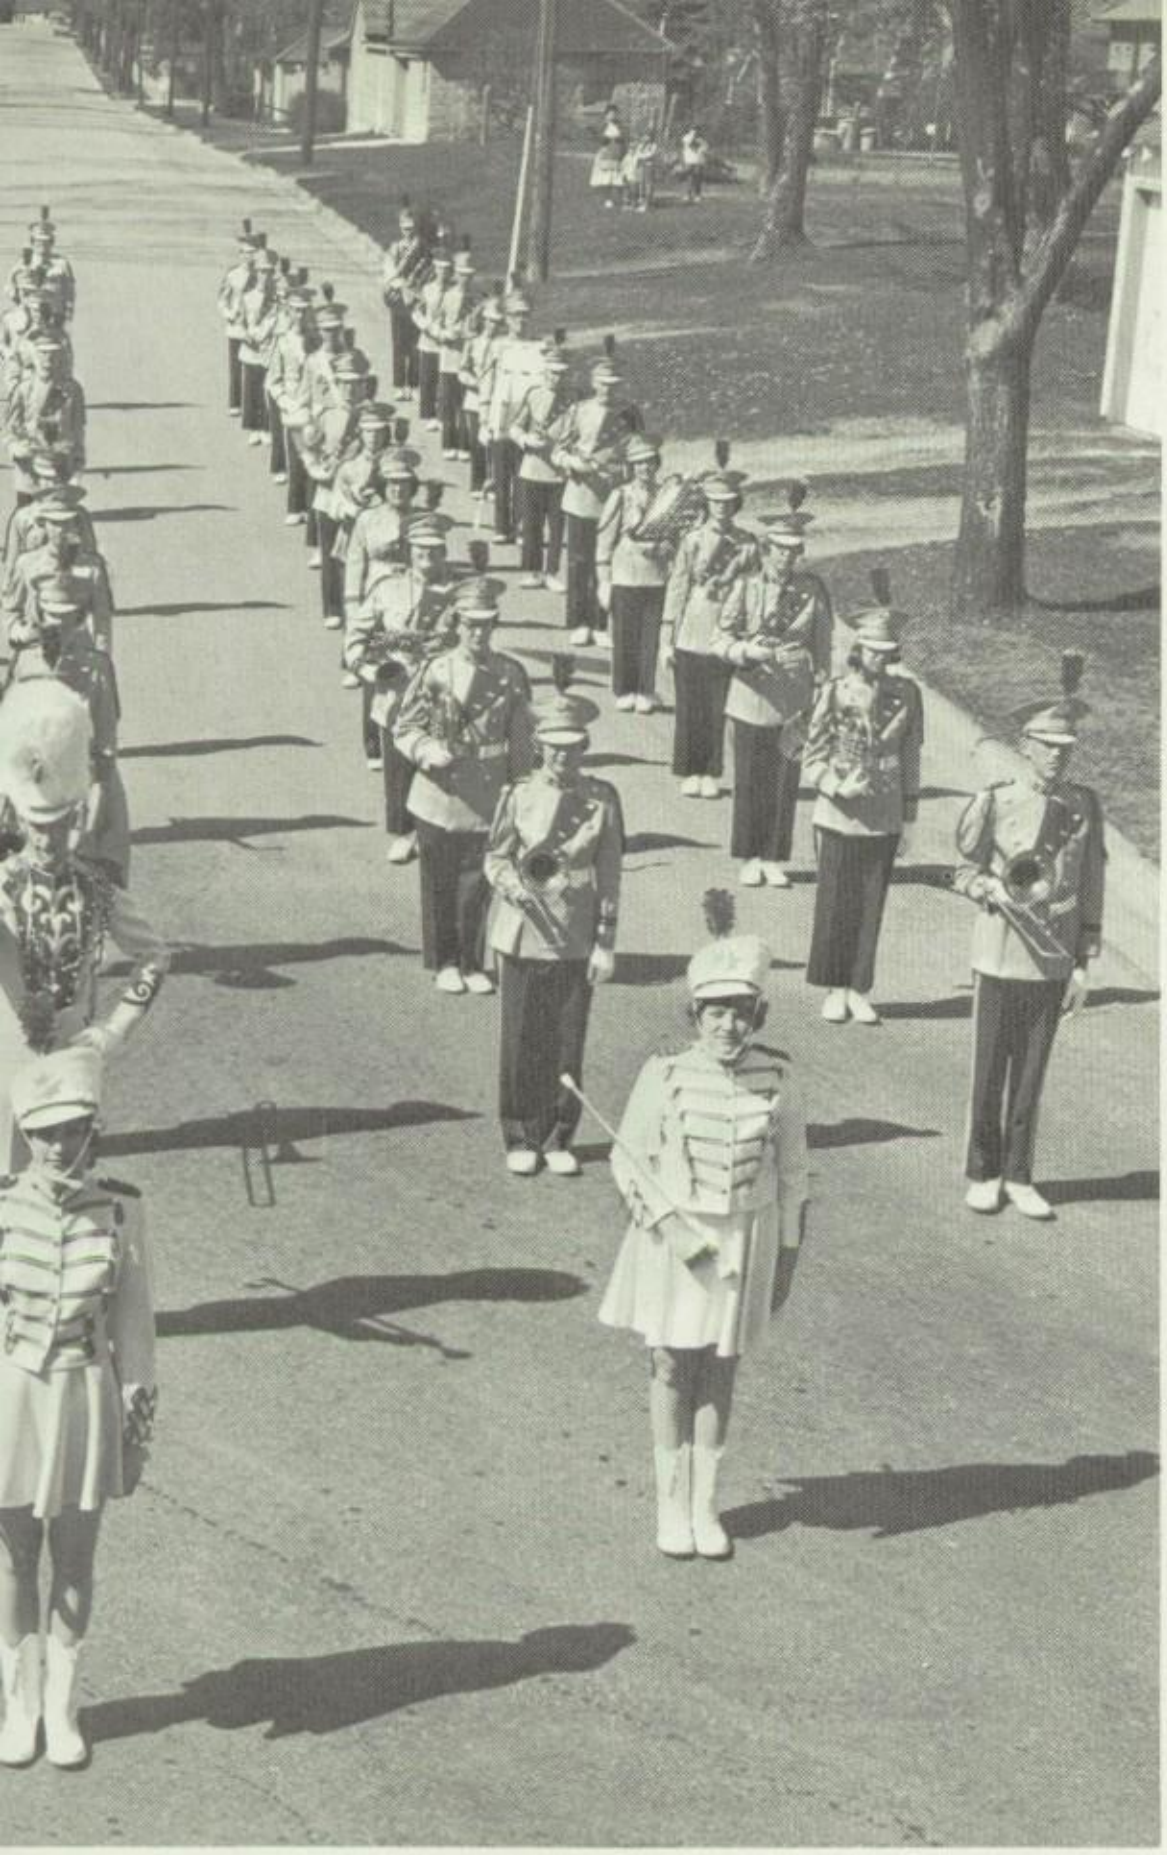
Fruit-filled urns on banquet tables Romanized the long banquet tables, but our stomachs demanded the more substantial punch and frosted cakes served here by Kathy Bink.

1963 Prom Royalty. Marilyn Wolf and Bob Bretschneider, Chris Cassidy and Chuck Buser, King Ron Theisen and Queen Janice Scholl, Ron Schreiner and Micca Schanen, Dave Buser and Pam Olson. Crownbearers were Terry Ann Schreiner and Mark Theisen.

Band Tournaments

One of the unnoticed changes of 75 years, our walkie-talkie to lubricate the program when in progress.

Preparation is the way we polish our performance. Major John B. Dauska and Director John Kimball give attention to important details.



We fill the streets of the city to wait for the pomp of marching bands. The timing and music that fills our bright spring Saturday . . . the entire day is spent in competition, but the climax is the test of marching under the discerning eyes of the crowds and judges.

Badger State

Badger Staters 1963. Jackie Schmit, Richard Antoine, Sue Ziehr, Paul Schaefer, Janice Scholl, Walter Chossek, Jan Swatek, Mike Metz, Kathy Tesker, Dave Opitz, Mary Miller.

We pack everything needed for a week's survival and leave for Badger State. We arrive in the midst of hundreds just like us from the entire state; we mix, we learn. It is a school in citizenship and government. We fight for office and campaign hard. We run our own affairs. There are the extra activities to test our skills, the practice for parade, the talent show and then the parting. We leave to spread the lessons we have absorbed.

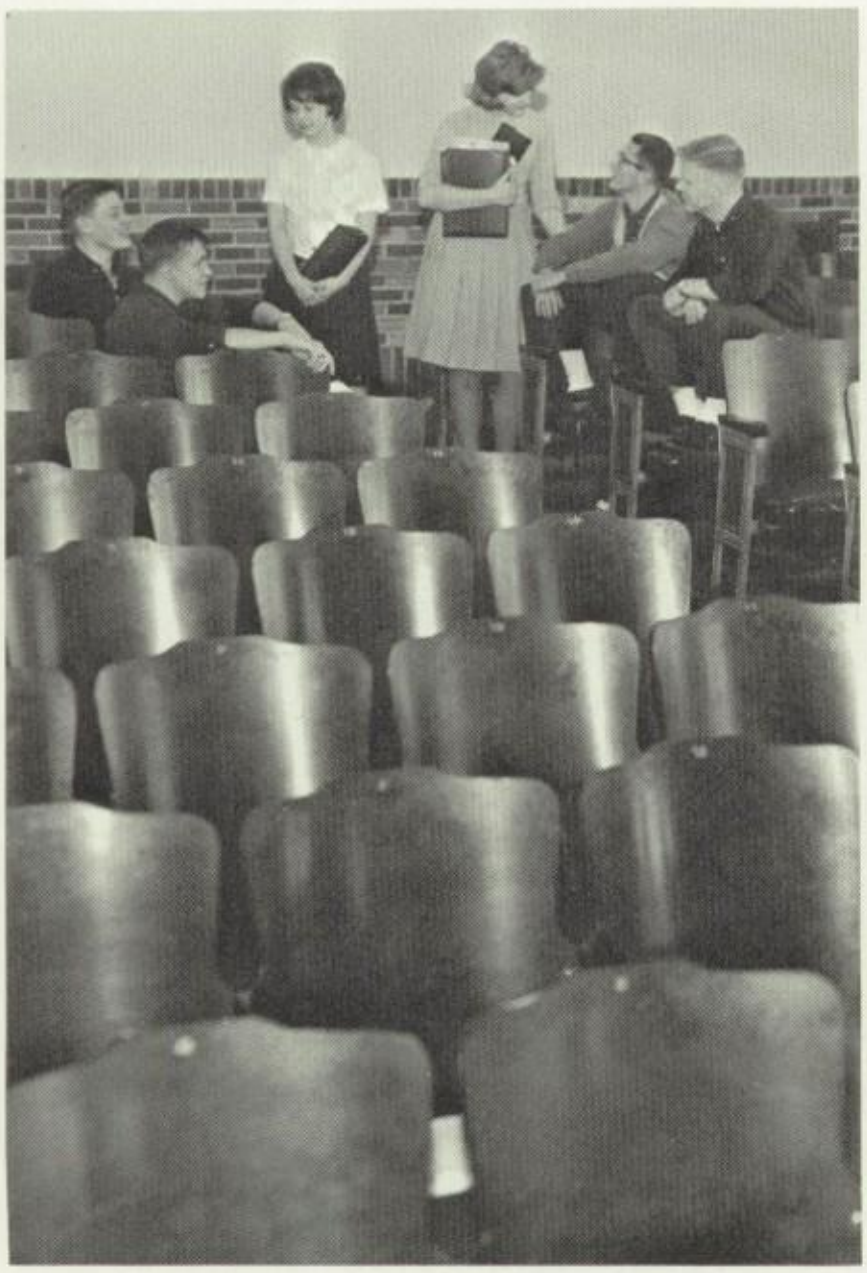
Graduates

Senior officers: John Boland, President; Paul Wiening, Vice-President; Sandi Stroessner, Treasurer; Monica Gigante, secretary.

Our senior pep meetings were the delight of Fridays. Sally Bell dictates the outline of what will be a final script after a few improvements. Jim Block, Paul Witzlib, Jim Anderson, Ed Erickson, Mary Ann Schanen, Sally and Sandi Stroesner are involved backstage.

Pride of the grads is the RIOT SQUAD, a class of '63 innovation that brought real color and spirit to the ball games. At full blast are C. Wilson, J. Dauska, J. Burton, J. Bowman, J. Anderson, B. Moon, D. Grossenbach, P. Witzlib, P. Schanen, E. Schultz, G. Albinger, J. Groessel, E. Erickson, J. Hill, D. Lallensack. The effect of game and squad combined is seen throughout the stands.



Volleyball champs are added to the list of senior accomplishments as we saw them defeat all comers. We catch an informal moment of the Exchange program as G. Phillips, Gilbert Kildare, Sandi Stroessner, Lenys Huwatschek, Kermit Brown and Jim Hill discuss and question.

Senior Dance

We perpetrate the tradition of a senior Christmas dance. We enjoy the spirit of the season and the nights of caroling. So it is a happy occasion as we gather around the fireplace.

Class Trip

We impatiently sit through the long third term awaiting Easter and the trip east. When the needed vacation comes, our more solvent members buy their tickets and off we go . . . the marble city of Washington, D.C. and the many parks, the sky scrapings of New York, Times Square, the shopping, all the fringe benefits of the train ride--these we remember well.

On with the Show

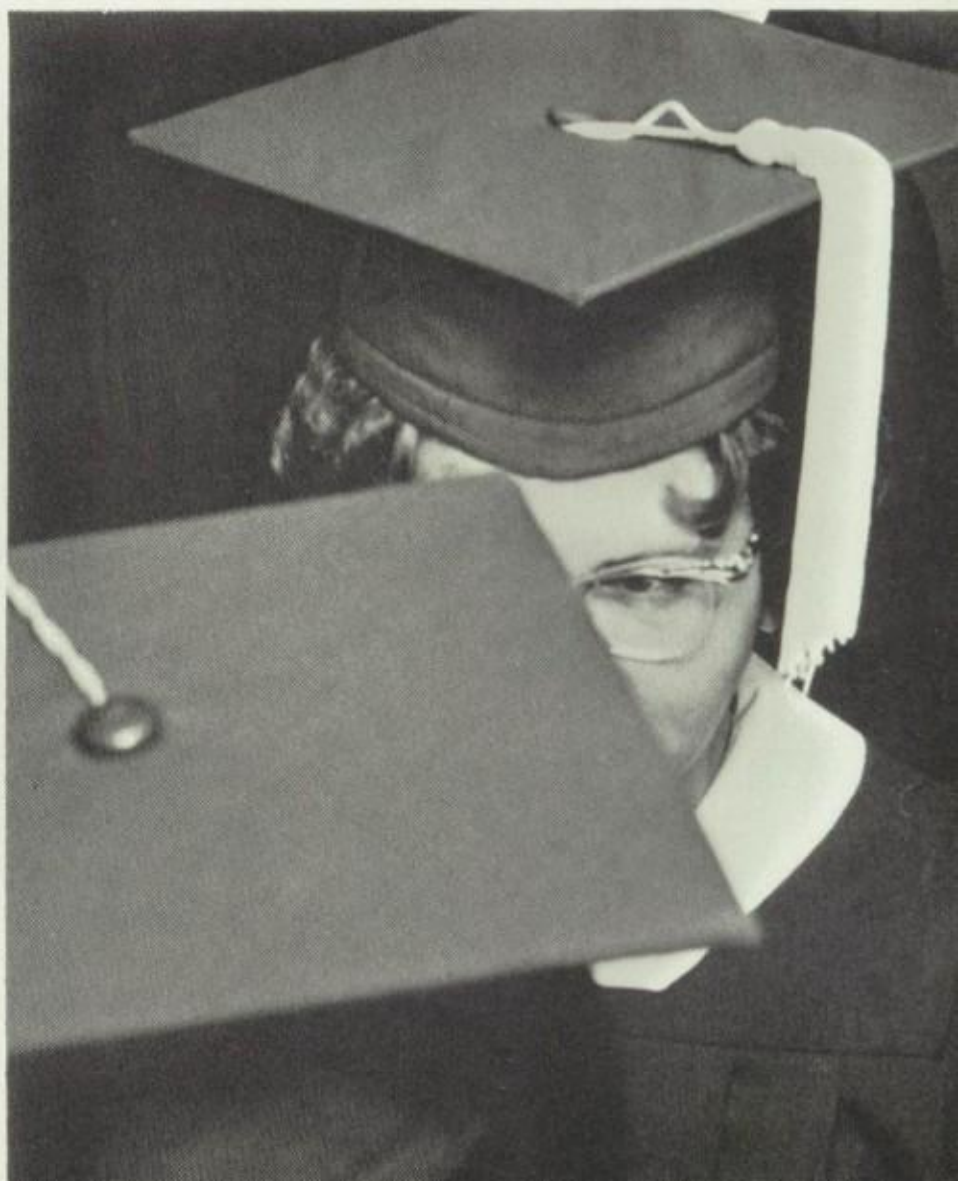
We gathered our talents and started a little show business. Mary Heinen and Charlie Wilson entered the show amid the chords of the opening, gave the welcomes, and then "On With The Show" . . . the girls were ready, our humorists poised, magicians quieting rabbits, pies filled, beatniks on the loose, and our troop of imported Negroes getting ready. We finally burst into a last song and waved good night.

Senior

Banquet

With venom--High and Mighty Fink, Super Fink and Executive Fink prepare for the Senior Banquet. No names were changed to protect anything. We sat there in terror and fear, hoping we would get one. Many of our frustrations and egos were taken care of. A visible reminder is the indifferent Fink in our trophy case.

Our last exercise is somewhere between the extremes of joy and sorrow. We feel a surge of pride and accomplishment with the completion of four years, yet our adjustment to the school makes it difficult to make the departure . . .



Seventy-Fifth Commencement

The evening begins and ends with the strains of music we readily recognize. We march in, hoping to keep in step. We listen to the benediction and it tells us something we unconsciously sense. The speaker develops his point and gives one lasting impression. The scholarships are announced one by one as we sit expectantly. Our president addresses us and then we start up to receive our diploma. We remember which is our left hand; then it is within our grip--then down the stairs, marching out, leave our robes and after our joyous greetings in the hall . . . we leave.

Acknowledgement

We pause before closing our book. We have perused the pages and their contents with interest and concern, hoping the subtle impact of seventy five years is personified in the composition of this school year. Our theme is underlying and the effect is almost unconsciously made rather than glowingly.

Our students serving as editors deserve recognition for their worthwhile dedication. Our representative, Mr. Bruce Parsons and the yearbook company made many special features available. Mr. and Mrs. Gene Picard of Colonial Studio are to be commended upon the quality of service, and we owe them many thanks for the trips and troubles they were set through in their first year with us. The administration has aided progress at many points. Members, such as Mr. John Angelos, have given us special attention. Advisor, Miss Virginia Holz, gave time, gas, money, patience, food, ideas, typewriter, sleep, nerves, hair, and her experience to accelerate production. The student body has been most cooperative in everything attempted. We met few setbacks.

In this moment of silence we meditate on the value of all within the covers, then quickly turn the last page and set it down.
